NOTICE OF MEETING!

The County Council

of Lennox and Addington will meet at the Council Chambers in the Court House, Napanee, on

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 24th

1914, at 2 o'clock p.m.

All accounts must be in the hands of the undersigned not later than Monday, November 23rd, in order that they may be considered.

W. G. WILSON,

County Clerk.

Dated Napanee, Nov. 5th, 1914.

EXECUTOR'S NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

In the Estate of Josephine Wagar, deceased.

Notice is hereby given pursuant to Chapter 121, of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1914, Section 56, and amending Acts, that all persons having any claims or demands against the estate of Josephine Wagar, late of the Village of Lennox, in the County of Lennox and Addington, who died on the 10th day of April, A. D. 1914, are required to deliver or send by post prepaid to HERRINGTON, WARNER & GRANGE, Executors of the last will and testament of the said Josephine Wagar, deceased, on or before the 7th day of December, A. D. 1914, their claims and demands, with full particulars of their claims or demands duly verified, and the nature of the security of any held by them.

And further take notice that after the said 7th day of December, A. D. 1914, the said Executor may proceed to distribute the assets of the said estate amongst the persons entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims or demands of which he shall then have received notice, and shall not be liable for the said assets, or any part thereof so distributed, to any person or persons of whose claims or demands he shall not have received notice at the time of the distribution thereof.

ALLIES HOLD ENEMY IN DIXMUDE LINE

London, Nov. 11.—The Germans have resumed their attack on the allied line between the coast and the Lys River, and, while the French claim generally to have held their positions the Germans have succeeded in capturing the town of Dixmude, which has been the centre of some of the fiercest and most sanguinary fighting of the war. The country between Dixmude and Ypres, where the belligerents have been engaged in violent attacks and counter-attacks for weeks past, and where the losses have been heavier even than those in the battle of the Yser, is again the scene of a battle which for fury has seldom, if ever, been equalled.

Behind Dixmude is the direct road to Dunkirk, one of the French ports on which the Germans have set their hearts, and if they can break through here the allies will be compelled to fall back to new positions. The invaders, have, therefore, been concentrating their forces at this point, and their success in taking Dixmude, where they claim to have captured five-hundred prisoners and positions to the west of Langemark, where according to the Berlin report, 2,000 prisoners fell into their hands, shows that the statements so freely made, that they have been sending troops from the west to Poland, are without foundation.

At other points along the battle-front in France the French official communication claims some successes for the allies, but the German headquarters staff declares that all attacks have been repulsed.

A British Gunboat Sunk by Germans

London, Nov. 12, 12:55 a.m.—The little British torpedo gunboat Niger, which was built twenty-two years ago and has been used as a tender, is the latest victim of a German submarine. She was torpedoed yesterday morning in the Downs north of the Straits of Dover, and foundered immediately. The officers and crew were saved.

The Admiralty in announcing the loss of the ship says:—

"The Niger, Lieut.-Commander Arthur T. Muir, was torpedoed this morning (November 11) in the Downs. All the officers and twenty-seven of the crew were saved. Four men were injured. It is thought that there was no loss of life.

"The Niger has been employed in semi-combatant duties."

The Downs is the name of a roadstead in the English Channel off the southeast coast of Kent, between Ramsgate and Dover.

The Niger had 810 tons displacement and a speed of nineteen to twenty knots. Her armament consisted of two 4.7-inch quick-fires, five 3-pounders and several torpedo tubes. She was used only for purposes of their way west of the canal, river and the railway, it might be difficult to stop them short of Dunkirk, which is only about 21 miles from Dixmude. ...

The plain truth is that there is a danger of the Germans breaking through. The capture by the Allies of Lombaertzyde, on the east bank of the Yser, near its mouth, is not to be compared in importance with the German win at Dixmude. The Kaiser's troops, however, had to throw it before, and made no progress through its possession. The same result will follow this time if the Allies have men available to stiffen their lines. To-day or Friday will tell. The loss to the Germans, who are the assailants in most cases, must be frightful. It was recently said by a prominent Canadian just back from London that at the War Office conference was expressed as to Joffre's power to turn the Germans out of France at any time that he cares to spend enough lives upon the task. He did not wish to do so believing that the German army was accomplishing its own destruction by throwing itself on the Allies' position along the battle-line. The fearful slaughter around Dixmude, Ypres, Lille and Arras may be part of Joffre's plan for wearing out his antagonists. It is to be hoped that wearing out process does not involve the evacuation of Dunkirk. That would not be regarded favorably in Britain.

Russian Pressure Forces Germans Back

Paris, Nov. 12.—A despatch from Petrograd to the Havas Agency says:

The Messenger Armeé prints a story to the effect that the Germans are constructing various kinds of barriers to impede the Russian advance, especially in the region of Czenstochowa, southwest Russian Poland, and are working night and day on the fortifications at Thorn.

Martial law has been declared at Cracow, and the civil population has evacuated the city.

Czenstochowa is sixty-five miles from Cracow as the crow flies.

WAR SUMMARY

Once more there is opportunity for higher criticism in interpreting the reports from the front. It would appear that what is said must be carefully considered in relation to the circumstances under which it is said if its real meaning is to be discovered. Yesterday morning, for example, the French official report said that "at the north the battle continues very violent." As a matter of fact, that report was made in the knowledge that Dixmude had been captured by the Germans by assault. This appears from last night's French official statement, which says: "The enemy has continued all day his effort of yesterday without accomplishing any new result. He has directed against Lombaertzyde a counter-attack, which has been repulsed, and has made vain attempts to debouch from Dixmude, on the left bank of the Yser." This must be read in conjunction with the German report, which says: "We made good progress yesterday (Tuesday) on the Yser, north of Ypres, and took Dixmude by storm, capturing more than 500 prisoners and nine machine guns. Farther south our troops crossed the canal, and west of Langemarch captured the first line of the enemy's position. About 2,000 infantry were taken prisoners and six machine guns were captured. South of Ypres we have driven the enemy out of St. Eloi.

Taking these two statements together it is quite clear that on a considerable section of the battle-front, from a point north of Dixmude to the Lys on the south, the Allies were forced on Tuesday to give ground, after suffering very considerable losses. The lines were reinforced yesterday, and at Dixmude, the key of the position, where the railway to Furnes and Dunkirk crosses the Yser Canal, and where there are several converging roads suitable for artillery, the Germans were prevented from making a further advance. The railway embankment and canal between Nieupoort and Dixmude were incorporated in the Allies' lines when fighting first began on the Yser, which runs west of the Yser Canal, paralleling it. Were the Germans to win

NOW ON GERMAN S

Russian Advance Has Reached
Border at Several Points.

Grand Duke's Vanguard Has Captured Coal in Railway Sidings
East Prussia Where Germans Have Left Hurriedly — Russians Hold Line of German Trench From Cracow North to Kalis.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 10.—The lowest communication from the Russian General Staff was issued yesterday night:

"On the East Prussian front
fighting continues. The Russian troops have occupied Solap
(dnap?) in the direction of Mlaw (land) we have advanced and stopped the movement of railway trains of enemy near the stations of Sol (East Prussia).

"Beyond the Vistula, the Germans have withdrawn from Wloclaw Nieszawa and from Konin to Szeslupoe?)."

"On the roads to Cracow we continue to push back the guards of the Austrians."

All the zones of contact are inside German territory. The Russians took 1,500 wagons laden with coal standing in the railway sidings in East Prussia in positions which Germans had evacuated. The Russian cavalry which invaded the position had pierced the left flank of the enemy at the crossing of the Wart Konin. These cavalry operations with strong supports, have nullified the entire defensive preparation of the Germans inside the Polish territory.

The Russians now hold without disturbance the great line of entrenchments running from Czenstoch southward on Cracow and northward on Kalisz.

Advices received from Vienna
state that the Russians are rapidly advancing on Cracow, and that in sequence the Austro-Hungarian military authorities are betraying anxiety, and calling up every available man to the colors.

RUSSIANS MOVE SWIFTLY.

Huge Army Is Now In Perfect Condition For War.

LONDON, Nov. 10. — The correspondent of The Times in Warsaw telegraphing under date of Nov. 9 says that after spending a fortnight
in the Polish field of operation, has arrived at the conclusion that Russian organizations is at last under way in every direction, and that in thirty days Germany either will have to submit to an invasion by Russian hosts or withdraw subst-stantial bodies of her best troops from the western frontier.

"Russia's huge army is now moving with a precision which is remarkable," he says, "and it is advancing with incredible rapidity and smothering every rear guard action with ward night and day. In many cases the bodies accomplish twenty miles (about 14 miles) daily."

FRIDAY.

The winter sailings of the White Star Line steamer Olympic have been cancelled, and yesterday the members of her crew were paid off.

Mrs. Catherine Roddy, aged 99, is dead at the County of Hastings House of Refuge, where she had been an inmate for over five years. She was born in Ireland in 1815.

The order closing the Chicago yards, on account of the widespread epidemic of foot and mouth disease, was yesterday afternoon extended to cover all yards and pens in the state.

Jay Bennett, whose home is near Marlbank, in Hungerford Township, was in the woods shooting with some companions, when he was shot through the heart, death being instantaneous.

James Sowards, aged 64, coal merchant, died suddenly of paralysis in his office yesterday in Kingston. He had lived in the Limestone City all his life. A wife, two sons and two daughters survive him.

The Panama Canal is again open to traffic. Col. Goethals cabled yesterday that shipping began passing Wednesday afternoon through a channel opened through the recent landslides north of Gold Hill.

Orders have been received by the military authorities at Kingston to organize a new battery for overseas duty with the second contingent. It will be composed of 145 men, 126 horses and four 18-pounder guns.

Luigi Rava, Minister of Finance, who held office in the new Italian Cabinet, announced Wednesday, was replaced yesterday by Signor Daneo, until now Minister of Public Instruction. In the latter office Daneo is succeeded by Signor Grippio.

SATURDAY.

A despatch from Salonika says that Ozogrophos, the former governor of that seaport, has addressed a proclamation to the Epirotes, informing them of the annexation of Epirus by Greece.

The British steamer Italia of the Anchor Line, bound from New York to Mediterranean ports has been detained at Gibraltar. The authorities there state that the Italia has contraband of war aboard.

Michael Serago of New York was sentenced yesterday by Justice Davis to serve from 20 years to life imprisonment in Sing Sing for the murder of William G. Martin, a Toronto milliner, last February.

A fourth squadron is being raised in London, Eng., by King Edward's Horse to make good losses sustained by the regiment in the firing line. One hundred men from any of the dominions are required.

The Carranza troops retired before an advance of 10,000 Villa soldiers after fighting twenty miles south of Aguascalientes, according to an official Villa report yesterday. Gen. Leon commanded the Carranza forces.

The correspondent of The London Times in Pas de Calais sends the following under Thursday's date: "I am credibly informed that the German losses in the supreme attack on the Brk'sh between Ypres and Lille are well over 50,000."

The North German Lloyd Line steamer Kronprinzessin Cecelle, arrived in Boston Harbor yesterday, ending her trip from Bar Harbor, Me., where she had been interned since a few days after the opening of the European war.

MONDAY.

It is officially announced in Vienna that there were 256 cases of cholera in Galicia last Thursday. Of these, 126 cases were in Przemyel.

Detroit and vicinity passed through Ontario yesterday to rejoin the colors in response to orders from the military authorities of Italy.

Impressive in its solemn simplicity was the funeral yesterday in Montreal of Prof. G. R. Mines, of McGill University, who died on Saturday while experimenting on himself.

Great Britain yesterday gave the United States official assurances that shipments of tobacco in neutral bottoms destined to any country in Europe would not be interfered with.

The sum of $10,850,000 was withdrawn from the sub-treasury at New York yesterday for shipment to Ottawa and other Canadian cities. All but $500,000 of the amount was in gold coin.

Lady Beck is donating 500 cholera belts to the 18th battalion of the second contingent, in training at London, and the rest of the men will be provided for in the same respect by the local Red Cross Society.

TO TRAVERSE CANAL?

Seven British Dreadnoughts On Way to Pacific, Says Rumor.

PANAMA, Nov. 10.—Panama Canal officials and members of the Legation here say they have no information concerning the report that seven British Dreadnoughts were in the Atlantic bound west, possibly with the intention of proceeding through the Panama Canal to Pacific waters.

Col. George W. Goethals, governor of the Panama Canal zone, says he has heard nothing from Washington relative to the use of the canal by warships.

The whereabouts of the German warships in the Pacific is unknown here.

Glasgow In the Straits.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 10.—The British cruiser Glasgow, which was engaged with the German squadron in a battle off the Chilean Coast on Sunday, Nov. 1, and the British transport Otranto have passed Delgada Point Light in the Straits of Magellan, bound for the Falkland Islands, a British possession to the east of the extreme southern point of South America.

This information is contained in advices received here by the Admiralty from the naval authorities in the Straits of Magellan, who said they had seen the Glasgow and Otranto passing through the straits toward the Atlantic.

Jap Warship at Honolulu.

HONOLULU, Nov. 10.—After receiving word that the German gunboat Geier had been interned here for the duration of the war, the Japanese battleship Hizen, which has been keeping a watch for the Geier outside the harbor entered this port yesterday for fuel and provisions. Under the neutrality regulations the Hizen is privileged to remain 24 hours.

But Kaiser William Hopes For Chance For His Cavalry.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—(Via London)—Emperor William, in an address to the officers of a cavalry division who he reviewed in a Belgian town, said:

"I learn with pleasure that the cavalry fought brilliantly. The horsemen in this war have been entrusted with tasks such as I never believed possible. It is perhaps my fault that training in times of peace never included the duties which the cavalry are here performing. The cavalry fought with bayonets and trenching tools and Gen. von Marwitz tells me that the infantry are proud to charge with their brothers of the cavalry."

"I hope, however, that the cavalry may yet have an opportunity to use their lances if we succeed, with the help of the dear God who already has permitted us so many successes, in surrounding the enemy."

TO ROOT OUT WIRELESS.

U. S. Government Suspects Existence of Secret Stations.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Persistent reports that hidden wireless stations along the coast of the United States are serving as information bureaus for belligerent cruisers at sea has caused the navy to enjoin the Navy Department to locate and destroy such stations if they actually exist.

According to the reports, both German and Japanese have the concealed wireless outfits. One is said to be located in the woods of the Maine coast another in the northwest, and still another on the Florida peninsula.

Japanese Army For Europe?

TOKIO, Japan, Nov. 10.—Since the fall of the German position at Tsingtau, the question of Japan sending an army to Europe has begun to attract increasing attention. The idea finds considerable support in military circles, where it is believed that such a move would be welcomed by France.

Executions In Constantinople.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—A large number of public executions have taken place in Constantinople in the past few days, the victims being principally those of opposite opinion to the Government. The police maintain the strictest watch and the expression of any idea favorable to peace or to allies is worth a man's life.

Servia Defeats Austrians.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Reuter's Nish Servia, correspondent reports that there was severe fighting Nov. 6 on all the Serbian fronts, the Austrians losing 1,000 killed and being compelled to retire to their former positions before Shpats.

Carranza Withholds Guarantee.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Administration officials admitted last night that the Mexican situation had again assumed a delicate aspect.

Gen. Carranza has partially fulfilled the Washington Government's request for guarantees before withdrawing the American troops from Vera Cruz, but his decree does not satisfy the main point asked for by the United States, that Mexicans who served the American Government during the occupation of the port, be not punished subsequently for such service.

CONFIDENT OF RESULT

Britain Will Carry the War to the Bitter End, Says Statesmen.

Premier Asquith, Earl Kitchener and Winston Churchill Are Centres of Interest at Guildhall Banquet Inaugurating Lord Mayor of London —Germany Has To Reckon With the Forces of the Great Dominions

LONDON, Nov. 10.—That Britain is prepared to carry on the war to the bitter end, with every confidence in the result, was the tenor of speeches at the annual banquet inaugurating the new Lord Mayor of London at Guildhall last evening, delivered by the men who are responsible for the conduct of the war.

Notable speeches were made by the Prime Minister, H. H. Asquith, Field Marshal Earl Kitchener, Secretary for War, and Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty. Lord Kitchener, whose massive figure, clad in service khaki, towered over the audience of a thousand men and women in the historic building, while expressing satisfaction at the response to his call for men and the progress of their military training impressed upon the nation that the war would be a long one, and he would require more men and still more until the enemy is crushed.

He also made a quiet reference to the British army, which, he said, "has proved itself to be not so contemptible an engine of war as some were disposed to consider it," and reminded his hearers that the enemy would, besides the army in the field, have to reckon with the forces of the great dominions, the vanguard of which had arrived in England, in addition to the million and a quarter men now training in this country.

Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, told of the work of the navy and continued:

"It is difficult to measure the full influence of the naval pressure in the early stages of the war, but it will spell the doom of German as surely as winter strikes the leaves from the trees."

As to the losses suffered he said: "The punishment we receive is clear and definite; the punishment we inflict is very often not seen, and when seen, very often cannot be measured. But time will tell."

The First Lord also pointed out that despite the losses, the navy was stronger in every way than at the beginning of the war.

Premier Asquith, who devoted much of his speech to the war with Turkey, said it meant "the death knell to Ottoman domination, not only in Europe, but in Asia."

He, too, predicted that the war would be a long one, but said that nothing would daunt their hopes or impair their resolve, and that England would not sheath the sword until Belgium had recovered all that she had sacrificed, until France had been secured from the menace of oppression and until the military domination of Prussia had been destroyed.

Scenes of extraordinary enthusiasm were witnessed. Added interest attached to the gathering by reason of the special circumstances of the times and the presence of the principal Ministers of the Crown responsible for the conduct of the war and the diplomatic representatives of the allied nations.

Confidence in the ultimate success of the allied arms was expressed by Earl Kitchener, who pointed out the great issue at stake, the advantages possessed by the allies in men and material and in "that wonderful

FINAL CONFLICT IS ON

Germans Are Making Supreme Effort to Take Ypres.

British Are Still Holding Position and Have Actually Made Several Advances at Storm Centre—Belgians Resist All Efforts to Dislodge Them—Success of Russia Draws More Troops From West.

LONDON, June 10.—Following the comparative lull of the past few days in Belgium and along the line in Northwestern France, the Germans have thrown six hundred thousand men into the fight for Ypres, held by British and French forces. When it seemed that the final word had been reached in the conflicts on his front, the fighting of yesterday is declared to be fiercer than ever before. The opposing armies simply fly at one another's throats and the attacking regiments come back in shreds. But despite everything the allies are still holding and have actually advanced at several points around Ypres and further west. The main German assaults are understood to have been delivered southeast of Ypres, all of which were frustrated. The present conflict will be the last on the present front. Either force must win or lose, and the allies await the outcome with perfect confidence.

From the bare and meagre details given out in Paris, it can be drawn that a major operation is under way. The opposing trenches are so close together that it is impossible to bring heavy guns into play for fear of inflicting as much damage on friend as on foe. Bayonet fighting is the order of the day and sanguinary contests mark every hour of the twenty-four. A heavy fog which rolled in from the North Sea served to complicate matters still further yesterday. Aviators were helpless in the face of this damp position and thus the military situation of Prussia had been destroyed.

Scenes of extraordinary enthusiasm were witnessed. Added interest attached to the gathering by reason of the special circumstances of the times and the presence of the principal Ministers of the Crown responsible for the conduct of the war and the diplomatic representatives of the allied nations.

Confidence in the ultimate success of the allied arms was expressed by Earl Kitchener, who pointed out the great issue at stake, the advantages possessed by the allies in men and material, and in "that wonderful spirit which has never understood the meaning of defeat." Continuing, Lord Kitchener said:

"The British Empire is now fighting for its existence. I want every citizen to understand this cardinal fact, for only from a clear conception of the vast importance of the issue at stake can come the great national moral impulse without which the Government's War Ministers, or even their navies, can do but little. We have enormous advantages in our resources of men and material and in that wonderful spirit of ours which has never understood the meaning of defeat. All these are great assets, but they must be used judiciously and effectively."

Paul Cambon, the French Ambassador to Great Britain, received an ovation. In the course of his speech he said: "The allies have not sought domination, but simply desired to save European civilization. Europe has suffered previous invasions of barbarians, but has never seen barbarism raised to a dogma, taught by doctors and praised by the intellectual elite. These professors of brutality believed that they had provided for everything, but had not provided that they would hurl themselves against the conscience of the civilized world."

CAN'T USE THEIR LANCES.

at Kaiser William Hopes For a Chance For His Cavalry.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—(Via London.) Emperor William, in an address to the officers of a cavalry division which reviewed in a Belgian town, said: "I learn with pleasure that the cavalry fought brilliantly. The horsemen in this war have been entrusted with tasks such as I never believed possible. It is perhaps my fault that the training in times of peace never included the duties which the cavalry is here performing. The cavalry fight with bayonets and entrenching tools and Gen. von Marwitz tells me that the infantry are proud to charge to their brothers of the cavalry. 'I hope, however, that the cavalry may yet have an opportunity to use their lances if we succeed, with the help of the dear God who already has granted us so many successes, in rounding the enemy.'"

TO ROOT OUT WIRELESS.

S. Government Suspects Existence of Secret Stations.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Persistent reports that hidden wireless stations along the coast of the United States are serving as information centers for belligerent cruisers at sea caused the navy to enjoin the Navy Department to locate and destroy such stations if they actually exist.

According to the reports, both German and Japanese have the concealed wireless outfits. One is said to be located in the woods of the Maine coast, other in the northwest, and still another on the Florida peninsula.

Japanese Army For Europe?

TOKIO, Japan, Nov. 10.—Since the fall of the German position at Tsingtao, the question of Japan sending an army to Europe has begun to attract increasing attention. The idea is considerable support in military circles, where it is believed that such a move would be welcomed by France.

Executions In Constantinople.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—A large number of public executions have taken place in Constantinople in the past few days, the victims being principally those of opposite opinion to the government. The police maintain the strictest watch and the expression of any idea favorable to peace or the emperor is worth a man's life.

Servia Defeats Austrians.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Reuter's Nish, via, correspondent reports that the Serbs were severe fighting Nov. 6 on the Serbian fronts, the Austrians losing 1,000 killed and being compelled to retire to their former positions before Srebats.

Carranza Withholds Guarantee.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Administration officials admitted last night that the Mexican situation had again assumed a delicate aspect.

Gen. Carranza has partially fulfilled the Washington Government's request for guarantees before withdrawing the American troops from a Cruz, but his decree does not satisfy the main point asked for by the United States, that Mexicans who aided the American Government during the occupation of the port, be punished subsequently for such aid.

must win or lose, and the allies await the outcome with perfect confidence.

From the bare and meagre details given out in Paris, it can be drawn that a major operation is under way. The opposing trenches are so close together that it is impossible to bring heavy guns into play for fear of inflicting as much damage on friend as on foe. Bayonet fighting is the order of the day and sanguinary contests mark every hour of the twenty-four. A heavy fog which rolled in from the North Sea served to complicate matters still further yesterday. Aviators were helpless in the face of this damp blanket and cavalry patrols were in constant danger of stumbling into a host of their enemies.

Along the sand dunes of the Flanders' coast, the Belgians are holding stubbornly to their own and all of the German efforts to advance have been beaten off. Another assault was attempted on Nieupoort, but without success.

Dixmude has been under a heavy bombardment and infantry movements were reported from that zone, the allies holding their own steadily.

The storm centre is at Ypres and here the British have concentrated their effectiveness. Nothing which the Germans have been able to do has ruffled the calm of their defence. The German guns shell the British positions, their troops come forward at the double, are driven off—a long line of dead and wounded marks their retreat. This manoeuvre is repeated over and over again, varied by counter assaults in which Tommy Atkins has so far more than held his own. But the cost in men is very serious, some regiments have lost nearly all their officers, and a number of splintered companies having been absorbed by others only less distressed. A train of wounded is constantly moving rearward.

As indicated in the War Office statement the French have met with excellent success on their centre and extreme right. The situation improves steadily around Verdun.

Private advices from Berlin, by way of Copenhagen, confirm the report that the Germans are transferring a considerable number of troops from the west to the east.

The German newspapers have not published the news of the great Russian advance to the Silesian frontier.

The news has been confirmed that the Crown Prince, in person, is commanding the central army on the eastern front of battle.

Another Berlin report declares that the Germans most decidedly have not abandoned their project of reaching Calais. The report adds that the main object of the western operations is still to open a road to the French coast.

A despatch from Berlin received last night by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co., says:

"Main headquarters reports that several of the enemy's ships again attacked our right wing yesterday afternoon, but were rapidly driven off by our artillery."

The correspondent of The Amsterdam Tijd at Antwerp says:

"The movement of German troops from the western theatre of the war, on a big scale is now progressing. A large number appear to have been withdrawn from the Yser."

"Long military trains filled with men and munitions are moving into Germany by way of Brussels and Louvain."

A despatch from Berlin says that a panic exists over the advance of the Russians into Eastern Prussia, and troops are being rushed to Poland from Belgium.

Trade of Austria Suffers.

VENICE, Nov. 10.—How severely the trade of Austria has been affected by the war is revealed in an official report of the Austrian Ministry of Commerce, a copy of which has just reached here from Vienna.

According to this document Austria's imports of September amounted to 111,000,000 crowns ($22,200,000), as compared to 260,000,000 crowns ($52,000,000) in September of 1913. The decrease in exports was much greater. They amounted in September of this year to only 61,000,000 crowns ($12,000,000), barely one-quarter of the total reached in September, 1913.

A Human Churn

WHEN the food reaches the stomach it is subjected to a peculiar churning movement by the muscular walls of the stomach.—(See Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, page 45). In the liver, kidneys and skin, the blood is purified of its waste materials—these organs act as human filters, leaving the blood pure and clear—unless liver, digestive tract and kidneys are clogged.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a stomach, liver and kidney tonic—by assisting the stomach to assimilate, the liver to filter, the kidneys to act—the poisons are removed, the red blood corpuscles are increased and one feels light, fresh and active instead of logy, dull and heavy. The "Discovery" stimulates the stomach, increases action of heart and arteries and is a most satisfactory alternative in blood-taint of any character. The refreshing influence of this extract of native medicinal plants has been favorably known for over forty years. Everywhere some neighbor can tell you of the good it has done.

TRAMP STEAMERS.

The Wandering Freighter Roams About Seeking a Cargo.

Why are some ships dubbed "tramps"?

Well, they are tramps just as some individuals are tramps. They go here and there, just as circumstances may dictate looking for employment.

But there is this difference—the tramp we meet on our roads says he is looking for work, but often enough he is secretly praying very hard that he may not find it. The ocean tramp simply has to find it. If she doesn't there is trouble. More, although some ocean tramps are dishevelled in appearance, by far the greater proportion of them have not the slightest suggestion about them of the untidiness of the tramp on which the policeman has to keep such a wary eye.

As a matter of fact many modern cargo boats are of huge dimensions, bearing comparison with the liners which quite a few years ago were regarded as prodigies of size. A tramp of six thousand tons is quite an ordinary vessel in regard to its dimensions. There are many much larger, and, of course, hosts much smaller.

They go anywhere. Where there is cargo to be found there is also the ocean tramp. She is bound to no particular port of call. She may be in the Orient one voyage, and in a short time may be nosing round the ports of, say, South America. Then freights from Mexican and American ports may show greater profits, and forthwith our tramp is off on a series of voyages between the Old and the New Worlds, until perhaps more profitable work offers elsewhere.

Throwing the Dart.

In widely differing communities—Venice and Cork—there obtains a curious ceremony, that of throwing the dart. In the first case this is an ancient custom signifying the marriage of the Adriatic. Every year, since 1177, on Ascension day, Venice has been made the bride of the sea, and the throwing of the dart is a picturesque feature of a picturesque ceremony.

Equally interesting are the circumstances attaching to the similar functions on the first Thursday of September in Cork harbor, Ireland. By virtue of a clause in the city charter the mayor of Cork is constituted admiral of the port. Every three years he must evidence his jurisdiction by throwing a dart into the sea.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the mayor, the town council, all the civic

SHAVES IN STRANGE PLACES.

Daredevils Who Remove Their Beards Under Difficulties.

Konschel, an Austrian aviator, performed an unprecedented feat a few days ago for a bet, when he shaved himself while circling the Vienna flying ground at an altitude of 3,000 feet. During the operation—after the preliminary and comparatively easy process of lathering was concluded—he had to steer with his feet, as he required the left hand to hold his cheek, while with the right he wielded the razor.

On more than one occasion the celebrated Blondin undertook successfully a similar achievement while standing upon a rope stretched across a giddy gulf. Indeed, he once performed this item of the toilette while carrying a passenger on his back—a passenger who in this case must have been himself a cool-headed gymnast, as after his supporter had finished he in his turn took the razor in hand and removed a day's growth from his chin.

Every now and again some daring Figaro has gained bold advertisement by exercising his calling in the unrestrained presence of the king of beasts. During the stay of Myers' Circus at Huddersfield a local barber wagered $25 that he would enter a cage of lions and shave their trainer within a space of five minutes. He won his bet with two minutes to spare. Even more foolhardy was a Norwich (Eng.) barber, who, in similar circumstances, shaved the trainer at Day's Menagerie, for, on one of the lions approaching somewhat too near, he gave the inquisitive carnivore a taste of the lather-brush.

Guillaume Duprat, Bishop of Clermont and founder of the College of Jesuits, at Paris, narrowly missed being shaved in his own cathedral. Duprat was the possessor of a beard so magnificent and luxurious in its growth as to awaken envy in all clerical hearts—envy even in those of his canons, who, so far from being proud of their chief's hirsute adornment, assembled in full chapter and resolved upon its removal. Preparations were made, and when next the bishop appeared in the choir a procession of ecclesiastical dignitaries, headed by the dean, advanced down the aisle carrying barber's basin, hot water, soap, and razor. The bishop, however, divined their intention, and promptly taking to his heels, managed to reach his castle of Beauregard, where, after a brief illness, he died of chagrin at the indignity which he had so narrowly escaped.

WON ON HIS BLUFF

How an American Consul Brought a Dictator to Terms.

A THREAT AND A SURPRISE.

The Venezuelan Despot to Whom Uncle Sam's Official Had Issued a Commo Opera Ultimatum First Got on His High Horse and Then Stepped Down.

A great many years ago Phil Hanna was consul at La Guayra, Venezuela, when a little revolution broke out. A military martinet in command of the town announced himself dictator and, needing money to carry on his activities, seized a bunch of American, English and German residents in the place and locked them in the town jail. They were informed that they would be released when they had made certain cash contributions to the revolutionary war chest.

Hanna was notified of the situation, and, looking up the consulate and leaving an extra sized American flag flying, he marched up to the headquarters of the dictator.

"Mr. Dictator," said Hanna, "I note that you have locked up a number of Americans. Permit me to introduce myself as the American consul."

The dictator asked what interest that fact had for him.

"It signifies that I am here in the name of my government to demand that these Americans be released instantly," replied Hanna.

"Can't do a thing for you," replied the general. "They've been told that when they cough up they'll be turned loose."

"They'll be turned loose without coughing and without delay," retorted Hanna. "I desire, in the name of my government, to say that if the Americans and all the European citizens whom you have locked up are not released by 6 o'clock this afternoon I shall proceed to shell the town."

"To shell—what'll you shell it with?" snorted the dictator. "Why, you haven't an American ship within a thousand miles, and you know it."

"What I said," replied Hanna with frozen faced dignity, "was that if those people are not released by 6 o'clock I'll shell the town." And he marched out again.

Hanna knew perfectly well that there wasn't an American ship nearer than New Orleans, and he knew the dictator knew it. But he had something up his sleeve. He went back to his office and waited patiently, meanwhile sending a clerk down to the water front to watch things.

The day wore on to mid-afternoon. Hanna was getting nervous. He must make good somehow. At last his messenger returned.

"Two British cruisers are coming into the harbor, sir," he reported.

"I knew they were due today," replied Hanna. "Now, you get word to the commander about what we've done here and tell him it's very important for him to come and see me."

At 5 o'clock that afternoon three very impressive officers in the uniform of the British navy came ashore and marched straight to the American consulate.

Hanna slouched out of his chair, shook hands all round and explained

GREAT WHITE THRONE AND ITS BLESSING

Messiah's Mediatorial Rule Earth for a Thousand Years.

Scriptures Filled With Symbolism Due Time To Appreciate Many These Symbols—Earth's History Thus Revealed—Deeply Ingrained Selfishness a Blight—Mankind Unable To Remove This Condition

PASTOR RUSSELL

Nov. 8.—Pastor Russell's discourse was a most instructive explanation of the "Great White Throne" and Him that sits on it, from which face the earth and the heaven flung away, and the world was found in place for then—Revelation 20:11.

The Pastor sympathized with the audience in the general dread w since 1177, on Ascension day, Venice has been made the bride of the sea, and the throwing of the dart is a picturesque feature of a picturesque ceremony.

Equally interesting are the circumstances attaching to the similar functions on the first Thursday of September in Cork harbor, Ireland. By virtue of a clause in the city charter the mayor of Cork is constituted admiral of the port. Every three years he must evidence his jurisdiction by throwing a dart into the sea.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the mayor, the town council, all the civic officers and the band of the Cork Civil Artillery embark on a vessel and proceed to a point between Poor Head and Cork Head, which is held to be the maritime boundary of the borough. The mayor dons his official robes, and attended by the mace and sword bearer, the city treasurer and the town clerk, likewise wearing their official robes goes to the prow of the vessel and launches into the sea a dart made of mahogany tipped and winged with bronze, in this way asserting his authority as lord high admiral of the port.

Taken Literally.

Wishing some bushes removed from his garden, a gentleman instructed his gardener to pull them up by the roots. Some time afterward he went into the garden and found the gardener digging trenches round the bushes.

"Why, George," he said, "you must not dig round those small bushes in that way. I am sure you are strong enough to pull them up by the roots."

"Oh, yes, sir," replied the gardener; "I'm strong enough, but I must dig a little before I can get hold of the roots. If you'd told me to pull them up by the branches I could, of course, easily have removed them without digging."—London Strand Magazine.

Children of Criminals.

It is a curious fact—one all at variance with the doctrines of heredity, but borne out by police records—that the children of crooks, of all classes, rarely turn out to be crooks themselves. Deeper study of the subject might reveal that they are possessed of the criminal instincts, but that the tragically close example of the punishment and wretchedness that attend a criminal career has been a terrifying deterrent. The fact, at any rate, remains. The rogues' gallery of Scotland Yard may be studied in vain for the photographs of a father and a son.

A Financial Shock.

A man went to a local bank with a check which there was no cash on deposit to meet. When the paying teller declined to respond the applicant loudly demanded to see the cashier.

"We have no 'cash here' for you," quietly responded the teller.

The man with the check saw the point. He moved in circles till he found his way out, tobogganed down the front steps and was led a block by a policeman before sufficiently recovered to make explanation.

The bishop, however, divined their intention, and promptly taking to his heels, managed to reach his castle of Beauregard, where, after a brief illness, he died of chagrin at the indignity which he had so narrowly escaped.

Louis I. of Bavaria issued an ordinance in 1838 forbidding citizens under any pretext whatever to wear moustaches, and directed the police to see that his will was promptly obeyed. Moustaches disappeared with astonishing celerity, the authorities having only on rare occasions to exert their power, which they then did with drastic promptitude, as when, on receipt of information that a wealthy banker, who had not yet complied with the order, was enjoying a bathe in the Isar, they procured a boat and, having supplied themselves with the necessary implements, overtook the swimmer, whose moustache they cut off there and then while he trod water.

Legal Lore.

His teacher was having a hard time explaining the geography lesson.

"Tommy, you can learn this if you make up your mind. It's not one bit smart to appear dull. I know that you are just as bright as any boy in the class. Remember, Tommy, where there's a will there's a way."

"Aw," broke in Tommy, "I know all dat, I do! Me fadder's a lawyer, an' I've heard him say it lots o' times."

"You should not have interrupted me, but I am glad that your father has taught you the old adage. Can you repeat it?"

"Sure. Me fadder says dat where dere's a will dere's always a bunch of poor relatives."

Buttonless.

"I've been reading an article on electricity, John," said a gossiping woman to her husband as she laid down a copy of a technical newspaper she had been perusing and looked over her glasses at her better half. "And it appears that before long we'll be able to get pretty well everything we want just by touching a button."

"It will never pay here," growled the husband. "You would never be able to get anything in that way."

"Why not, John?"

"Because nothing on earth would ever make you touch a button. Look at my shirt!"

The Legal "SS."

The symbol "s.s." used in legal parlance is an abbreviation of the Latin word "scilicet" and means "to wit" or "that is to say." It is used to call attention to what is immediately to follow, introducing explanatory matter relating to what has immediately preceded. Other abbreviations for the same word are "Scil" and "Sc." The word "scilicet" is in itself a contraction of the Latin words "scire licet," and means, literally, "it is permitted to know."

Prolonged Applause.

It was at the end of the second act of the worst musical comedy of the season—absolutely the worst.

"What are you applauding for?" said the thin man to the stout person at his side.

"To show how thankful I am that the curtain's down at last," replied the stout person as he reached for his hat.

singer returned.

"Two British cruisers are coming into the harbor, sir," he reported.

"I knew they were due today," replied Hanna. "Now, you get word to the commander about what we've done here and tell him it's very important for him to come and see me."

At 5 o'clock that afternoon three very impressive officers in the uniform of the British navy came ashore and marched straight to the American consulate.

Hanna slouched out of his chair, shook hands all round and explained his scrape. The naval man wanted to know how he could best serve the necessities of the moment.

"Just go back on shipboard and begin clearing those vessels for action in the most ostentatious way you can," replied Hanna. "I'll do the rest."

As soon as the necessary time had elapsed to assure that these facts would have duly impressed themselves on his dictatorship Hanna started for the palace again. He didn't have to wait for admittance.

"Have the American and European prisoners been released?" he asked.

"They have not yet," replied the dictator.

"Then permit me to say that at 6 o'clock sharp, as I mentioned this morning, I begin shelling this town!"

"Where's your American ships?" persisted the dictator.

"The two British cruisers that have entered the harbor today are under my orders," replied the American consul, "and we'll blow you and your town off this coast before morning if you don't perform. Do you get it?"

The dictator didn't know whether it was bluff or not, but at 5:30 o'clock the prisoners were turned loose.

course to— was a most instructive explanation of the text: 'I saw a great White Throne and Him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and the place for them was found in Revelation 20:11.

The Pastor sympathized with his audience in the general dread with which the Day of Judgment is regarded. He also held the common view at one time, but now knows why its inconsistency and its terrible misrepresentation of the Divine Program. The false view, he declares began to be introduced in the Second Century, and human fear and superstition have made it worse. The Bible, on the contrary represents the Judgment Day as a period of glory and blessing. I called attention to the Psalmist's exhortation that all mankind should rejoice because the Lord would come to judge the world with righteousness and the poor with equity.—Psalm 98:9.

According to Scripture, the world Judgment Day will be the world's opportunity for coming to a knowledge of God and for then being tried, tested, judged, as to their willingness to serve and obey God and His righteous Government. Those few heartily obedient will be granted everlasting life with every joy and blessing appropriate to man in perfection. Those rebellious and disobedient will be destroyed in the Second Death without hope of future existence.

Earth's Judgment Day will be a time when all the heathen will have their trial, after they shall have been brought by Messiah's Kingdom to clear knowledge of the Truth. They will the masses of Christendom have their first real opportunity to hear of the true character of God and learn what He requires of them. Although some of them may have been in churches occasionally, and may have seen Bibles, nevertheless the eyes of their understanding were darkened. The god of this world has blinded their minds, the Apostle declares.—2 Corinthians 4:4.

"The Great White Throne."

The speaker showed that the Throne mentioned in his text is Messiah's, and represents His Mediate Dominion of earth for a thousand years. Its whiteness indicates the purity of the justice which will be meted out by the great Redeemer earth's King. The heavens and earth which will flee from His presence are not the literal heavens and earth but the symbolical.

In Bible symbology the earth represents established civilization; the sea, the restless, dissatisfied masses of humanity; and the mountains, kingdoms, human governments which constitute the backbone present spiritual influence.—Ecclesiasticism. Thus interpreted, our text declares that when Messiah's Kingdom is established, both the social and the ecclesiastical system of the day will pass out of existence—place will be found for them.

The people will not be judged by nations nor by systems, but as individuals. The judgment, or trial, will not merely test those living at the time of the establishment of the Messianic Kingdom, but eventually will include all the dead, who will be brought forth from the tomb.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Nov. 8.—Pastor Russell's discourse to-day was a most instructive explanation of the text, "I saw a great White Throne and Him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them."—Revelation 20:11

The Pastor sympathized with his audience in the general dread with God is no respecter of persons. Hence before His judgment Throne punishments will be meted out to small and great alike, when found to be violators of the principle of justice. The speaker would that this fact could be impressed upon many of the lower classes, who are crying out against the injustices in high places, while practicing similar injustices themselves. It should be remembered that the blessings of Divine favor are for those who love righteousness and hate iniquity.

The Books Will Be Opened.

The books of the Bible will then all be opened—understood. Mankind will then see that the Golden Rules laid down by inspiration through Moses and the Prophets, through Jesus and His Apostles, are the very ones which God will require of men in the future, and which Messiah will enable the willing and obedient to comply with by assisting them up out of their sin and degradation. The judgment of that time, the test, will not be of faith, as with the Church now; for knowledge will then be universal. At that time the test will be of works.

Pastor Russell declared that another Book of Life will then be opened. The one now open is styled "the Lamb's Book of Life," in which are recorded the names only of those who accept the call to become members of "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife." The new Book will be for those on trial

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Speculative selling, due to the absence of any radical bullish news, operated as a drag today on the wheat market. Prices at the close were unsettled, $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$ lower than Saturday night. Other cereals, too, suffered a net decline—corn $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$, and oats $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$. In provisions the outcome was unchanged to 10c down.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 9.—The wheat market was steady this morning. There were no Liverpool prices quoted, but it was understood values there were unchanged. Trading was light generally, altho, owing to heavier receipts, quite a lot of hedging was being brought out, the cause for this being an easier tone, and prices fractionally lower. Later there came some good buying of May futures by export houses, causing a strengthening of values. The cash demand for wheat was good, oats and barley were also wanted, and all offerings were easily sold.
Good sales for export have been marked and export firms were heavy buyers of both futures and cash grains. Winnipeg wheat futures closed $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$ higher, oats closed $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$ lower, while flax closed unchanged.
Winnipeg cash: Wheat—No. 1 northern, \$1.21 $\frac{1}{2}$; No. 2 do., \$1.17 $\frac{1}{2}$; No. 3 do., \$1.13; No. 4 do., \$1.07 $\frac{1}{2}$; No. 5 do., 98 $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢; No. 6 do., 94 $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢.

Flax—No. 1 N.W.C., \$1.26 $\frac{1}{2}$; No. 2 C.W., \$1.23 $\frac{1}{2}$.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 9.—There continues to be a good demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat, and sales of several loads were made at an advance in price of 6d per quarter, but the counter-offers were 1d to 1s per quarter better. The local trade in coarse grains continues quiet, but the tone of the market is very firm. Demand for flour is quiet, but the undertone to the market is strong and higher prices are being talked of. Millfeed is fairly active with a better demand from both local and country buyers.
The butter market is quiet and steady, finest creamery at the auction sale today selling at 27 $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢. Cheese is firm, but business over the cable was quiet today. Exports for the week were 34,649 boxes, as compared with 34,397 for the corresponding week last year.

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Doucette Tells of her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.

Belleville, Nova Scotia, Can.—"Three years ago I was suffering badly with what the doctors called Change of Life. I was so bad that I had to stay in bed. Some friends told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me from the first. It is the only medicine I took that did help me and I recommend it. You don't know how thankful and grateful I am. I give you permission to publish what your good medicine has done for me."—Mrs. SIMON DOUCETTE, Belleville, Yarmouth Co., Nova Scotia, Canada.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, back-aches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

THE FIRELESS COOKER.

Some of Its Advantages & Regards Economy.

Whatever opinions might have been held in regard to the merits of the fireless cooker as a regular substitute for heat, it cannot be denied that it is a very great convenience during warm weather.

Among the advantages gained by the use of the fireless cooker are these: A cool kitchen during the day and no odor from cooking. Then, again, food cannot be overcooked, even though it stays in the cooker beyond its allotted time, so if one forgets or is busy in the garden, there need be no fear of food spoiling. Left over the fire it might burn and this not only means waste, but the cleansing of greasy, scorched cooking utensils.

The cereal for breakfast can be prepared over night and found thoroughly cooked and steaming hot in the morning. And since cooking in the fireless is long and steady, inferior cuts can be made into very savory dishes that will eat much more tender than if cooked in the usual way.

A fireless cooker should be a boon to the housekeeper at the summer camp or cottage, because it will do the work, while the family plays, and need no watching either.

It is an economical way, too, in that all the nutrition is retained by enable the willing and obedient to comply with by assisting them up out of their sin and degradation. The judgment of that time, the test, will not be of faith, as with the Church now; for knowledge will then be universal. At that time the test will be of works.

Pastor Russell declared that another Book of Life will then be opened. The one now open is styled "the Lamb's Book of Life," in which are recorded the names only of those who accept the call to become members of "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife." The new Book will be for those on trial during the Messianic Reign, and found worthy of life everlasting.

ASTOR RUSSELL

The Pastor sympathized with his audience in the general dread with which the Day of Judgment is regarded. He also held the common view at one time, but now knows well its inconsistency and its terrible misrepresentation of the Divine Program. The false view, he declared, began to be introduced in the Second century, and human fear and superstition have made it worse and orse. The Bible, on the contrary, presents the Judgment Day as a period of glory and blessing. He called attention to the Psalmist's exhortation that all mankind should rejoice because the Lord would come to judge the world with righteousness and the poor with equity.—Psalm 3:9.

According to Scripture, the world's judgment Day will be the world's opportunity for coming to a knowledge of God and for then being tried, tested, judged, as to their willingness to serve and obey God and His righteous Government. Those found earthly obedient will be granted everlasting life with every joy and blessing appropriate to man in his perfection. Those rebellious and disobedient will be destroyed in the Second Death without hope of future existence.

Earth's Judgment Day will be the time when all the heathen will have their trial, after they shall have been brought by Messiah's Kingdom to a true knowledge of the Truth. Then all the masses of Christendom have their first real opportunity to hear the true character of God and to learn what He requires of them. Although some of them may have been in churches occasionally, and may have seen Bibles, nevertheless the masses of their understanding were darkened. The god of this world had blinded their minds, the Apostle declares.—2 Corinthians 4:4.

"The Great White Throne.

The speaker showed that the throne mentioned in his text is Messiah's, and represents His Mediatorial Dominion of earth for a thousand years. Its whiteness indicates the purity of the justice which will be meted out by the great Redeemer as earth's King. The heavens and earth which will flee from His presence are not the literal heavens and earth, but the symbolical.

In Bible symbology the earth represents established civilization; the sea, the restless, dissatisfied masses of humanity; and the mountains, the kingdoms, human governments, which constitute the backbone of present spiritual influence—Ecclesiasticism. Thus interpreted, our text declares that when Messiah's Kingdom is established, both the social and the ecclesiastical system of today will pass out of existence—no trace will be found for them.

The people will not be judged by nations nor by systems, but as individuals. The judgment, or trial, will be merely test those living at the time of the establishment of the Messianic Kingdom, but eventually will include all the dead, who will be brought forth from the tomb.

The new Book will be for those on trial during the Messianic Reign, and found worthy of life everlasting.

The world's judgment will be according to works, because knowledge will then be so great that faith will no longer be at a premium. The Mediator will accept imperfect works according to the ability of the people. As they rise out of degradation, more will be required of them until in the end they will be perfected.

Height of Waves.

Among the most trustworthy scientific measurements of ocean waves are those of Lieutenant Paris of the French navy. The highest waves measured by him were in the Indian ocean between the Cape of Good Hope and the island of St. Paul. Thirty waves measured during a northwest gale there averaged twenty-nine and one-half feet in height, and six of them, following one another with beautiful regularity, were thirty-seven and one-half feet in height. Some still higher waves were seen, but not measured. In a moderate breeze the length of a wave was found to be about twenty-five times its height, but in a gale only eighteen times.—London Globe.

A Kind Wish For Mother.

The five-year-old found his mother looking a bit unhappy.

"Have you a pain, mummy?" he asked sympathetically. When she nodded he thought a minute and then exclaimed:

Hogs.
Selects fed and watered sold at $7.50; $7.75 weighed off cars, and $7.15 f.o.b. cars at country point.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 9.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market an easy feeling continues to prevail for cattle, owing to the liberal supplies coming forward, but prices were practically unchanged from last week. Trade in fairly good steers was fairly active, of which the supply was fair, and sales were made at $7 to $7.25, while fair stock brought from $6 to $6.75 per 100 pounds. The tone of the market for canning stock was weak, owing to the liberal offerings, and prices scored a further decline of 25c per cwt., with sales of bulls at $4.25 to $4.50, and cows at $3.50 to $4 per cwt.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for sheep or lambs, but the feeling was strong, and the prospects are that prices will go higher in the near future, owing to the fact that supplies are falling off. Ontario lambs brought $7.50 to $7.75, and Quebec $7 to $7.25, while ewes brought $7 to $7.25 per cwt.

The demand for grass-fed calves was good, at prices ranging from $6 to $10 each. Milk-fed calves were scarce and wanted. The market for hogs was firm, with a good demand from packers, and sales of selected lots were made at $8, sows at $6, and stags at $4 per cwt., weighed off cars.

cooking utensils. The cereal for breakfast can be prepared over night and found thoroughly cooked and steaming hot in the morning. And since cooking in the fireless is long and steady, inferior cuts can be made into very savory dishes that will eat much more tender than if cooked in the usual way.

A fireless cooker should be a boon to the housekeeper at the summer camp or cottage, because it will do the work, while the family plays, and need no watching either.

It is an economical way, too, in that all the nutrition is retained by using the fireless, also the natural flavor of all foods is preserved. There is no chance for escape. Seeing, then, the fireless has so many advantages it seems singular there should be any objections against it.

Those women who believe in it claim that the reason why others refuse it is because they looked for miracles from the fireless and were disappointed. Then they at once condemned it wholesale and took no trouble to experiment. It requires intelligence to bring good results by this method of cooking, as well as by any other. While the food will cook itself, it must be properly prepared, of course. There are certain rules to be followed if success is to be the result. For instance: The saucepan must always be filled to the brim either with food or water, as the case may be, as a stew will come up to the top, and if vegetables are cooking the water must reach the same height. When vacant space is left the heat escapes.

No intelligent woman would put food to cook over a fire and let the fire go down so that the water ceased to boil and still expect the food to cook properly, but some people seem to expect that the fireless cooker should perform such a miracle.

Never open the cooker until the necessary time for cooking the contents has expired. In such a case the pot must be reheated over the stove. Again, if any food seems to be unusually tough, more time should be allowed. It should stay fully an hour longer than the allotted time.

Another most important point to be remembered is that the contents of the pots must be boiling before being placed in the cooker.

Ancient Cloisonne Enamels.

The ancient artists who made those exquisite cloisonne enamels which bring such high prices made them by the following laborious method: The outlines of the design to be executed in enamel were cut out in the metal plate in such a manner that between the limits of the colors in the enamel a narrow metal ribbon was left standing. The space within the outlines was worked out with the graving tool, the surfaces left standing being made as rough as possible. In the hollows, the mass, made into a thick paste with lavender oil or water, was placed and fused fast in the muffle, this process being frequently repeated. Finally the surface was ground and polished.

Appropriate.

A family of children, after the usual Saturday night romps, gathered in the drawing-room for music and singing. As bedtime was drawing near the mother said:

"Now, children, choose one hymn to finish up with, and then you must all say 'Good night!'"

"Let's have 'Ere Again Our Sabbath Close,'" suggested a bright little girl of about seven years of age.

"Well, I think that would be more suitable to-morrow evening," replied the mother.

"Oh, but you always air our Sabbath clothes on Saturday, mummy!"—London Tatler.

UTAH'S NATURAL BRIDGE.

The Secret of Its Origin Somewhat Puzzles the Scientists.

What is thought to be the largest natural bridge in the world is that of southwestern Utah, known as the George natural bridge. The total length of this great work of nature is about 200 feet; its width—i. e., the "roadway"—is about thirty-five feet; the span in the clear is about ninety feet. At the base there flows a small water course which, during the hot months, dwindles to a mere rivulet.

Scientists are somewhat perplexed to explain the means by which nature produced this bridge. It is thought hardly possible that it could have been created by water erosion, unless, as was most unlikely, there was a very large and swift stream flowing at the point where the brook now runs.

Some authorities are inclined to the view that this bridge was due to volcanic action, occurring at some remote geological period.

Although long known to the Indians, it was not until about fifteen years ago that white men became familiar with the sight of it. Mining prospectors were the first of the whites to see it, since it is located in the heart of a very rugged and inaccessible region.

The span is composed of a dark brown sandstone of unusual hardness, and the thickness of the span is twenty feet or more.

Engineers who have examined this bridge assert that it is perfectly safe and secure and that it is fully capable of sustaining an immense weight, especially as the span is free from flaws or seams.—Washington Star.

LINED WITH SPIDER WEBS.

One Has to Cut One's Way Through the Roads of Paraguay.

The roads of Paraguay are about five yards wide throughout, and the trees meet overhead at a height of some eighteen feet, thus forming a tunnel of very uniform dimensions. In the clear parts of the tunnel—that is, where it is not choked up with the giant nettle—it is full from roof to ground of enormous spiders' webs stretching clear across the road, the big trees usually being chosen as anchorages and the total clear span being thus more like eight yards than five.

The main cables or framework of the nets are composed of five or six strands of thick yellow web and are almost as strong as cotton thread. The rest of the net is made up of single and double strands of the same stout material, which is as sticky as it is strong. Every yard or so one of these nets extends across one's path, making it necessary to hold a cutlass or a fairly stout stick at arm's length in front as one walks.

The makers of these troublesome but picturesque obstructions are large, highly colored, gaudy looking spiders with bodies that look as if they were about to explode, they are so blown out and glossy.

At intervals in some more open space where the sky is visible one will notice a different kind of web, far more irregular in shape, but far larger than the others. Not content with the space available in the tunnel, these webs are stretched in complicated mazes from the ground to the very tops of the surrounding trees, with clear spans frequently twenty or thirty yards from one tree to another.

From these main cables smaller ones extend to the ground—a drop of fifteen or twenty yards—and the spaces in between are filled up with a mass of webs spun in all directions.—Wide World Magazine.

When Arctic Natives Feast and Pick Their Life Mates.

A very primitive custom of the natives of the Bering and arctic coasts of Siberia, a custom that has come down from generations of savage ancestors, is the annual celebration of the whale dance, when the Eskimos select their wives.

When the sun moves southward at the end of the short summer season and the ice closes up the northern seas the whales come down to open water. Then, in celebration of the season's catch, the ice dwellers assemble for the whale dance, which lasts twenty-one days.

The great dance circle is prepared, and in the center the dancers, both male and female, perform the most savage of evolutions and motions to the accompaniment of rhythmless beating of the tomtoms and weird chanting. The dance songs tell of the prowess of the hunters and of the history of the tribe. The movements of the women are surprisingly graceful, and they mean to show in their dance that, as daughters of a great people, they are possessed of all the qualities such women should have. The men execute pantomimic scenes of the hunt and go through all the motions of the kill. They spear the ice bear, slay the walrus and seal and finally, with extraordinary contortions, vanquish the mighty whale.

During the last days of the feast, when the time arrives for the selection of husbands and wives, the man performs his mate dance before the woman he has picked out. In pantomime he promises to provide her generously with the fruit of the hunt, both food

Mr. Ape Had No Memory, but Lots of Curiosity and Cowardice.

"Curiosity and cowardice," said the one legged veteran, "are the chief characteristics of all monkeys and of most men. I worked in a zoo after the war. I was the keeper of the monkey house. My biggest charge was an ape the size of a twelve-year-old boy, and it was through his curiosity and cowardice that I used to manage him.

"We exercised this ape in the big room every day, but when we wanted him to go back to his cage he'd climb up to the roof of the big room, and even with food you couldn't tempt him down.

"So I would go to Jack Lover and take him gently by the arm and direct his attention in a quiet, mysterious manner to the dark passage under the steam pipes.

"Lover and I every day tiptoed to the pipes. We pretended to point out to each other some horrible, unknown creature in the passage, and we'd say: 'Look out! There he is! There he is!' "As we held each other's arms and bent over and peered into the darkness we'd hear very soon the delicate patter of small, active feet. The ape's curiosity had got the better of him. He crouched beside us. He, too, peered into the dark passage fearfully.

"Then suddenly Lover would shout: 'Look out! He's coming out! He's coming out!' And we'd scamper away

ABOUT CONSUMPTION

Throughout the world, consumption claims more victims than any other disease. It takes toll of every age in life, more often than not of the fairest and best. Efforts are being made to stamp it out in every quarter of the civilized world. It is in our city, it is in every city. Each year its grim harvest is reaped. What can be done, is being done. Here and there, success is achieved. One case, right in Toronto, that was given up by the doctors as hopeless, cheated the grave of its victim. This case is of interest to everybody, especially so for the reason that all hope of recovery was abandoned at the time Mr. Copeland began his treatment. The doctors had given the patient only 8 to 10 days to live, yet he was pulled through by the power and merits of Mr. Copeland's medicine. This was in March, 1911, and the patient, Mr. David Warnock, is TO-DAY in the city of Toronto ALIVE and WELL. We publish here his own testimony, and he is, moreover, willing to state the facts of his condition at that time and of his recovery to anyone suffering from consumption.

Mr. W. R. Copeland:

Dear Sir.—Now that I am well and strong again, I write to state that the fact I am alive to-day witnesses to the merit of your medicine.

My doctor, a specialist, said that I had the worst kind of consumption and that it was impossible for me to live. He gave me only eight to ten days before the disease would terminate fatally. He also said that it was no use in treating me, as I was too far gone.

I was left to die, but a friend of mine told me about your medicine and procured me a bottle. Without much hope, I tried it. It did wonders. First the weakening perspiration stopped and the food I took stayed in the stomach. After a second bottle, I commenced to regain my appetite and was up in a few days of the time that the doctor said I should die. Five weeks later I was at work and have been working ever since.

I wish everyone could know the worth of your medicine, especially those afflicted with consumption as I was, for I undoubtedly owe my life to its use. I will at all times cheerfully answer any correspondence, and you are at liberty to publish this letter if you think it will help to recommend your medicine to others.

I remain, gratefully yours,

Its Ridge of Sodom and Its Fetid but Clear Blue Waters.

It is in the southeastern part of Palestine where the famous Dead sea lies. In the Old Testament it was known as the Sea of the Plain or Salt sea, but it is known today by the Arabs as the Sea of Lot. Its surface, which is lower than any other body of water, is 1,292 feet below the level of the Mediterranean.

The Dead sea is fed by the river Jordan from the north, but has no outlet, depending entirely upon evaporation. A portion of the sea is surrounded by cliffs which are destitute of vegetation. On the south shore is the ridge of rock salt, seven miles long and 300 feet high, known as the ridge of Sodom. Lava beds, sulphur and volcanic slag prove the existence of volcanic agencies at some period. The lake still casts up pieces of asphalt when the environs of the Dead sea are visited by earthquake.

Its proportion of saline matter is so great that it contains more than eight times as much as the ocean, and, while it is exceedingly fetid, yet its water is as blue as that of the Mediterranean, and to the bathers it is very refreshing, and owing to its specific gravity it is difficult to sink. Nothing living exists within the waters of the Dead sea.—Buffalo Express.

During the last days of the feast, when the time arrives for the selection of husbands and wives, the man performs his mate dance before the woman he has picked out. In pantomime he promises to provide her generously with the fruit of the hunt, both food and fur. If she is pleased with him she walks out and dances her acceptance and shows how she will look after the igloo. When they have danced before each other they are married after the custom of the tribe, and he leads her off to his walrus hide lodge.

During the dance they feast on whale. The skin of the baleen whale is about an inch thick and looks like rubber. The solid blubber between it and the true flesh is usually about fourteen inches thick. The black skin and the blubber, the latter cut to the thickness of the former, is called muktuk and is considered a great delicacy. It is eaten raw and, although it sounds repulsive to the civilized ear, is most palatable. It has a flavor something like that of chestnuts.—Youth's Companion.

Prime Numbers.

It might appear at first that every number can be divided by some number besides itself and one; but many numbers cannot, and if they cannot they are known as prime numbers. Of all the numbers having a value of less than 1,000, there are 169 that are prime. Of these twenty-six are smaller than 100, twenty-one appear between 100 and 200, sixteen between 200 and 300, sixteen between 300 and 400, seventeen between 400 and 500, fourteen between 500 and 600, sixteen between 600 and 700, fourteen between 700 and 800, fifteen between 800 and 900 and fourteen between 900 and 1,000.

His Vacation.

A woman had a negro cleaning the yard for her. His wife had been dead for several years. So his employer seized a favorable moment and proceeded to sound him.

"John," she said, "you're a good, steady man. Lots of women would be glad to have you. Why don't you get a wife?"

John leaned on his rake and scratched his head reflectively.

"Well, I tell you," he replied. "You know I was married seven years, an' I've got to have a rest."—Indianapolis News.

WALLACE'S

LINED WITH SPIDER WEBS.

Has to Cut One's Way Through the Roads of Paraguay.

The roads of Paraguay are about five miles wide throughout, and the trees set overhead at a height of some fifteen feet, thus forming a tunnel of uniform dimensions. In the clear parts of the tunnel—that is, where it is not choked up with the giant nets—it is full from roof to ground of enormous spiders' webs stretching far across the road, the big trees usually being chosen as anchorages. The total clear span being thus only like eight yards than five. The main cables or framework of the nets are composed of five or six strands of thick yellow web and are as strong as cotton thread. The rest of the net is made up of single and double strands of the same stout material, which is as sticky as it is strong. Every yard or so one of these nets extends across one's path, making it necessary to hold a cutlass or a fairly stout stick at arm's length in front as one walks.

The makers of these troublesome but picturesque obstructions are large, ghly colored, gaudy looking spiders with bodies that look as if they were about to explode, they are so blown out and glossy.

At intervals in some more open space where the sky is visible one will notice a different kind of web, far more regular in shape, but far larger than the others. Not content with the space available in the tunnel, these webs are stretched in complicated patterns from the ground to the very tops of the surrounding trees, with air spans frequently twenty or thirty yards from one tree to another.

From these main cables smaller ones extend to the ground—a drop of fifteen or twenty yards—and the spaces in between are filled up with a mass of webs spun in all directions.—Wide World Magazine.

TERRIBLE DEEDS DONE BY GERMANS

Wounded Belgian Tells of What He Saw

BRIDGE MADE OF DEAD.

By D. Douglas Eppes, one of The Toronto World's Staff Reporters With the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Salisbury, Eng., Oct. 24.—Scattered throughout the length and breadth of England—and of Scotland and Ireland, too—are hundreds of private houses which have been turned over to the war office to be utilized as hospitals. Some of these are mansions; some small residences, but whatever their capacity for Red Cross work at this time of writing, most of them have their full quota of patients.

It was at one of these "house hospitals," near the village of Hayes, in Kent, that The World representative gained his first experience of the sterner side of this war. Also, he was told a tale of German atrocities in ravaged Belgium which would seem unbelievable were it not corroborated by the testimony of thousands of other sufferers.

In this little hospital, when the World called in company with another Canadian officer, were 10 wounded Belgians. The billiard-room and drawing-room had been converted into wards, and here in comfortable beds lay these few of the defenders of Antwerp. Eight of the ten had been hit by shrapnel, one by a fragment of a shell and one only by rifle fire. One man had been struck in the jaw, the bullet passing out behind the spinal column. All of them had defended Fort Kessel until defence was no longer possible, and then, with the Germans a few hundred yards away, stricken as they were, they managed to crawl into the city and join the frantic throngs who were on the march to the sea.

It was from Corporal G. H. Filippe of the 110th Belgian Infantry that some details were gathered of the heroic defence of the last Belgian BITTER CRITICISM.

Nursing a wound in his forearm and crippled with rheumatism as the result of days and nights in the water-soaked trenches, he told his account of the fighting he had seen since the war commenced. He spoke fair English, but at times when the recollection of all he had suffered came to him, he broke into impassioned French. These were the times when he broke off his narrative to indulge in bitter criticism of the Germans. His sole anxiety seemed to be to get well again and to go back to the firing line. It may be his wish will be gratified, but not for a few months if the doctor is to be believed.

"I came up to service the day the Germans invaded our country," said the corporal. "My wife and child I have not seen since. Perhaps, like hundreds of other women and children they have met their death at the hands of the butchers."

TERRIBLE ATROCITIES.

Here he caught a look of surprise on the face of your correspondent and raising himself up with difficulty he said: "Ah, monsieur, you do not believe the German soldiers are guilty of atrocities. Let me tell you that I have seen men, and boys, too, with their noses cut off and their ears cut

EMDEN DESTROYED.

Terror of Shipping in Oriental Waters Smashed by Australian Cruiser, and Koenigsberg Bottled by the Chatham.

London, Nov. 10.—The Admiralty statement issued to-day, announcing the destruction of the German cruiser Emden in the Indian Ocean and the bottling up of the German cruiser Koenigsberg on the east coast of Africa, reads as follows:

"After the whereabouts of the Koenigsberg had been indicated by the attack on the Pegasus, on the 19th of September, a concentration of fast cruisers was arranged by the Admiralty in East African waters, and a thorough and prolonged search by these vessels in combination was made.

CHATHAM COULD NOT REACH HER.

"This search resulted Oct. 30, in the Koenigsberg being discovered by H.M.S. Chatham, Captain Sidney R.

and escaped unscathed through the Straits.

The vessels destroyed by the Emden had a total value of about $1,000,000, exclusive of their cargoes, valued at about $6,000,000. The Emden's largest guns are only 4.1-inch, of which she has ten.

The Keeling or Cocos Islands are a group in the Indian Ocean belonging to Great Britain. They are about five hundred miles southwest of the western end of the Island of Java, and have cable connections.

SYDNEY WELL ARMED.

The Australian cruiser Sydney carries a main battery of eight 6-inch guns against the Emden's ten 4.1, thus giving her a heavy advantage over the German ship. While the speed of the two warships was theoretically equal, that of the Emden being 24.5 knots as against the Sydney's 24.7, the former probably was fowl and her engines badly racked from her three months of almost constant cruising in southern waters, chasing and being chased, and with no port for refitting or repairs.

Her speed of 24.5 knots is her greatest asset, as she had been able to run down merchant ships with ease and then escape from larger but slower war vessels that have pursued came up to service the day the Germans invaded our country," said the corporal. "My wife and child I have not seen since. Perhaps, like hundreds of other women and children they have met their death at the hands of the butchers."

TERIBLE ATROCITIES.

Here he caught a look of surprise on the face of your correspondent and raising himself up with difficulty he said: "Ah, monsieur, you do not believe the German soldiers are guilty of atrocities. Let me tell you that I have seen men, and boys, too, with their noses cut off and their ears cut off. Not Belgian soldiers, but peaceful citizens. Why was this done? I do not know, unless because the barbarians thought they were dealing with people who had furnished their Belgian fellow-countrymen with information. I have seen worse. I have seen the body of a little baby, a three-year-old boy, who had been bayoneted by a brave Prussian and then pitched into his mother's arms. I know of worse things but they cannot be written about. Do you know that they took an 11-year-old boy scout and cut off his right hand? 'You will not fight against us,' they said, 'even if you are showing the English the way to the front.'"

THEY ARE BARBARIANS.

By this time several of the other patients were sitting up listening to their corporal's story. "That's true," said two in unison, and others nodded their heads. "They are barbarians. Better that a Belgian shoots himself than fall into their hands."

The corporal went on to describe the bombardment of the forts on the southwest of Antwerp. The first intimation that the defenders of Fort Kessel had of the approach of the invaders was the explosion of a shell which wrecked part of the fortifications. It had been fired from a 16-inch howitzer at a distance of not less than 13 miles. Not a German was in sight and yet within an hour following the salvo of the big shells the fort was untenable.

The defenders went to the trenches and there awaited the onslaught of the German infantry. Three times the Prussians sought to bridge a shallow stream which lay between them and their objective; and three times the Belgians with field guns, machine guns and rifle fire drove them back. The loss was enormous.

MADE BRIDGE OF DEAD.

"They were lying in heaps," said Corporal Philippe, "in heaps all over the plain and in the river. And then, under cover of heavy guns, they came on again, and this time they crossed the stream. They crossed it on the bodies of their own dead, which they carried and plunged into the shallow water. Yes, that is true. Ask my comrades."

The Belgian N.C.O. narrated some of the hardships endured by the fugitives in the retreat from Antwerp. How wounded men had dropped down on the road and died without a chance of having their hurts attended to. How women and men had fallen exhausted and had not been since heard of. How soldiers, without sleep for a period of three days in the trenches, had marched along half asleep supported by comrades.

"My country," said the corporal, who in civil life is an electrician, "is wiped out. The 'cultured' Germans have made of prosperous Belgium a blackened, desolate desert. Of my own regiment only a handful remain. But the day will come when we will repay Monsieur le Prussian for his work. All we ask now is revenge. It will come."

Certainly if every Belgian is animated with the same spirit as Corporal Philippe, it will be a black day for kaiserism when the tide of war begins to change.

...Africa, reads as follows: "After the whereabouts of the Koenigsberg had been indicated by the attack on the Pegasus, on the 19th of September, a concentration of fast cruisers was arranged by the Admiralty in East African waters, and a thorough and prolonged search by these vessels in combination was made.

CHATHAM COULD NOT REACH HER.

"This search resulted Oct. 30, in the Koenigsberg being discovered by H.M.S. Chatham, Captain Sidney R. Drury-Lowe, hiding in shallow water about six miles up the Rufiji River, opposite Mafia Island, German East Africa. Owing to a greater draught the Chatham could not reach the Koenigsberg, which probably is aground except at high water. Part of the crew of the Koenigsberg had been landed, and is entrenched on the banks of the river."

CHANNEL COMPLETELY BLOCKED.

"Both these entrenchments and the Koenigsberg herself have been bombarded by the Chatham, but owing to the dense palm groves amid which the ship lies it is not possible to estimate the damage done. Pending operations for her capture or destruction, effective steps have been taken to block the Koenigsberg by sinking colliers in the only navigable channel to the river, and she is now imprisoned and unable to do any further harm. The fast vessels which have been searching for her are thus released for other service.

"Another large combined operation by fast cruisers against the German cruiser Emden has been for some time in progress. In this search, which has covered an immense area, the British cruisers have been aided by French, Russian and Japanese vessels working in harmony. The Australian warships Melbourne and Sydney also were included in these movements.

EMDEN FORCED TO FIGHT.

"Yesterday morning news was received that the Emden, which had been completely lost to sight after her action with the Russian cruiser, Jemtchug, had arrived at Keeling or Cocos Island and landed an armed party to destroy the wireless station. Here she was caught and forced to fight by the Australian cruiser Sydney, Captain John Glossop.

"A sharp action took place in which the Sydney suffered the loss of three men killed and fifteen wounded. The Emden was driven ashore and burned. Her losses in personnel are reported as very heavy. All possible assistance is now being given to the survivors by the various ships which have been despatched to the scene.

"With the exception of the German squadron now off the coast of Chile, the whole of the Pacific Ocean is now clear of the enemy's warships.

EMDEN EXACTED BIG TOLL.

The Emden has contributed to the history of the war, as thus far recorded, one of the most remarkable chapters. For sheer audacity and success of accomplishment it has few parallels. Twenty-two ships, mostly British, have been sunk, and one has been captured by the German cruiser.

Since early in August the Emden has been at work. Most of the time she was preying on British shipping in the Indian Ocean, but late last month she suddenly appeared at Penang, on Malacca Straits. It was here that the Emden performed her most daring feat. A fourth-smokestack was rigged on her deck and a Japanese flag run up. Thus disguised, she steamed boldly into the harbour, passing unchallenged under the British guns of the fort, and fired torpedoes which sank the Russian cruiser, Jemtchug and a French destroyer. Then she took to her heels thus giving her a heavy advantage over the German ship. While the speed of the two warships was theoretically equal, that of the Emden being 24.5 knots as against the Sydney's 24.7, the former probably was fowl and her engines badly racked from her three months of almost constant cruising in southern waters, chasing and being chased, and with no port for refitting or repairs.

Her speed of 24.5 knots is her greatest asset, as she had been able to run down merchant ships with ease and then escape from larger but slower war vessels that have pursued her.

It has been more or less of a mystery to naval men how the Emden has been able to keep at sea month after month without running short of coal and supplies. It is assumed, however, that she has obtained sufficient food and fuel from captured ships to meet her needs. In at least one instance this is known to have been done. The captain of the British steamer Exford, captured by the Emden in the Indian Ocean, reported to his owners that the commander of the Emden said that before he sank the Exford he intended to take on board his cruiser the 7,000 tons of steam coal with which the Exford was laden.

EMERALD.

Huskings, rafflings and dancing are the amusements of the evening.

Miss Nancy Burleigh attended the teachers' convention in Napanee.

Edward McGinn has returned home from the west.

Miss Edith Laidlay, Ernesttown, came over to attend the 'Prentice Boys' dance.

Emerald cheese factory has closed.

Morris Glass has gone to Brockville. Born to Mr. and Mrs. James Gibson, a daughter.

Which?

Is woman more interesting than man, or the reverse? Man varies more. He has more genius in exceptional individuals, and less of genius-like insight in the average person. He completes; woman endures. He builds externally, she at home. He fights; she preserves. Our worthless opinion is that men are more interesting than women, but that woman is more interesting than man.—Harper's Weekly.

Encouragement.

"But she says she has never given you any encouragement."

"Did she say that?"

"She certainly did."

"She told me that her uncle was going to leave her a fortune and that he had one foot in the grave. If that is not encouragement I'd like to know what you call it."—Houston Post.

Plenty of Jaw.

Two cockney "liddles" were discussing each other publicly. One said something about the other's "jaw," or "jore." "Garn," answered her opponent, "you've got enough jaw for two sets of teeth, you 'ave."—London Telegraph.

Handicapped.

"Down in my part of the country if a man lays 50 cents on a stump and hoots like an owl he can get a quart of wildcat whisky."

"That wouldn't help me any. When I'm very dry I can't hoot."—Baltimore Sun.

Bismarck and Music.

Bismarck's utterances regarding music are compiled in a book "Kendell, 'Furst und Furstin Bismarck, Erinnerungen aus den Jahren 1846-1872.' Kendell once saw the man of blood and iron shed tears during a performance of Beethoven's Sonata Appassionata. His favorite composers were Beethoven and Schubert. The only thing he did not like in the works was the variations. These, he said, "do not speak to the heart." Concerning the sonata just referred to, he remarked: "This is like the singing and sobbing of a whole human life. If I heard this music often I should always be brave."

JAPAN MAY SEND
ARMY INTO FRANCE

Tokio, Nov. 9.—Talk of sending a Japanese army to France is growing steadily. Now that Tsingtau has fallen a considerable force of men is available and as many more as necessary can be mustered. It is believed the offer of such a force would strike a popular chord in England and not improbably in France.

There is a great good feeling here over the success of the Japanese and British armies in China. The English and Japanese admiralities have ex-

The Story of Waitstill Baxter

By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN

Copyright, 1915, by Kate Douglas Wiggin

"I'll get you anything you want in Portland tomorrow."

"Certainly not; I'd rather be married in rags than have you spend your money upon me beforehand!"

"Remember to have a box of your belongings packed and slipped under the shed somewhere. You can't be certain what your father will say or do when the time comes for telling him, and I want you to be ready to leave on a moment's notice."

"I will; I'll do everything you say, Mark. But are you sure that we have thought of every other way? I do so hate being underhanded. Everything depends on my keeping it secret from Waitstill, but she doesn't suspect anything yet. She thinks of me as nothing but a child still. Do you suppose Ellen would go with us just to give me a little comfort? I shouldn't miss Waitstill so much if I had Ellen, and how happy I shall be if she approves of me for a sister and thinks your mother and father will like me in time."

"There never was a creature born into the world that wouldn't love you, Patty."

"I don't know; look at Aunt Abby Cole," said Patty pensively. "Well, it does not seem as if a marriage that isn't good in Riverboro was really decent. How tiresome of Maine to want all those days of public notice; people must so often want to get married in a minute. If I think about anything too long I always get out of the notion."

"I know you do. That's what I'm afraid of." And Mark's voice showed decided nervousness. "You won't get out of the notion of marrying me, will you, Patty dear?"

"Marrying you is more than a 'notion,' Mark," said Patty soberly. "I'm only a little past seventeen, but I'm far older because of the difficulties I've had. I don't wonder you speak of my 'notions.' I was as light as a feather in all my dealings with you at first."

"So was I with you. I hadn't grown up, Patty."

"Then I came to know you better and see how you sympathized with Waitstill's troubles and mine. I couldn't love anybody; I couldn't marry anybody who didn't feel that things at our house can't go on as they are. Father has had a good long trial. Three wives and two daughters have done their best to live with him and failed. I am not willing to die for him, as my mother did, nor have Waitstill killed if I can help it. Sometimes he is like a man who has lost his senses, and sometimes he is only grim and quiet and cruel. He takes our marriage without a terrible scene, Mark, perhaps it will encourage Waitstill to break her chains as I have ever laughing and teasing, so that a fellow could never be sure of you for two minutes together."

"It's all there underneath," said Patty, putting her hand on his arm and turning her wistful face to his. "It will come again. The girl in me isn't dead. She isn't even asleep, but she's all sobered down. She can't laugh just now, she can only smile, and the tears are waiting underneath, ready to spring out if any one says the wrong word. This Patty is frightened and anxious, and her heart beats too fast from morning till night. She hasn't any mother, and she cannot say a word to her dear sister, and she's going away to be married to you, that's almost a stranger, and she isn't eighteen and doesn't know what's coming to her nor what it means to be married. She dreads her father's anger, and she cannot rest till she knows whether your family will love her and take her in, and oh, she's a miserable, worried girl, not a bit like the old Patty!"

Mark held her close and smoothed the curls under the loose brown hood. "Don't you fret, Patty darling. I'm not the boy I was last week. Every word you say makes me more of a man. I wish the road to New Hampshire was full of lions and I could fight my way through them just to show you how strong I feel."

"There'll be lions enough," smiled Patty through her tears, "though they won't have manes and tails. But I can imagine how father will roar and how my courage will ooze out of the heels of my boots."

"Just let me catch the deacon roaring at my wife!" exclaimed Mark, with a swelling chest. "Now, run along home, Patty, dear, for I don't want you scolded on my account. I'll sound Ellen and see if she's brave enough to be one of the eloping party. Good night! Good night!"

CHAPTER XXII. A Wedding Ring.

THE snow had come. It had begun to fall softly and steadily at the beginning of the week, and now for days it had covered the ground deeper and deeper, drifting about the little red brick house on the hilltop, banking up against the barn and shrouding the sheds and the smaller buildings.

There had been two cold, still nights, the windows were covered with silvery landscapes whose delicate foliage made every pane of glass a leafy bower, while a dazzling crust bediamonded the hillsides, so that no eye could rest on them long without becoming snow blinded.

Town House hill was not as well traveled as many others, and Deacon Baxter had often to break his own road down to the store without waiting for the help of the village snow plow to make things easier for him.

Many a path had Waitstill broken in her time, and it was by no means one of her most distasteful tasks—that of shoveling into the drifts of heaped up whiteness, tossing them to one side or the other and cutting a narrow, clean edged track that would pack down into the hardness of marble.

There were many "chores" to be done these cold mornings before any household could draw a breath of comfort. The Baxters kept but one cow in winter, killed the pig—not to eat, but to sell—and reduced the flock of hens and turkeys, but Waitstill was all ways as busy in the barn as in her own proper domain.

Her heart yearned for all the dumb closely as to the state of her affections, intimate as she was with her sister's thoughts and opinions about life. She simply bided her time until Patty should confide in her.

She had wished now and then that Patty's capricious fancy might settle on Philip Perry, although, indeed, when she considered it seriously, it seemed like an alliance between a butterfly and an owl. Cephas Cole she regarded as quite beneath Patty's rightful ambitions, and, as for Mark Wilson, she had grown up in the belief, held in the village generally, that he would marry money and position and drift out of Riverboro into a gayer, larger world. Her devotion to her sister was so ardent and her admiration so sincere that she could not think it possible that Patty would love anywhere in vain. Nevertheless she had an instinct that her affections were crystallizing somewhere or other, and when that happened the uncertain and eccentric temper of her father would rise a thousand obstacles.

While these thoughts coursed more or less vagrantly through Waitstill's mind she suddenly determined to get her cloak and hood and run over to see Mrs. Boynton. Ivory had been away a good deal in the woods since early November chopping trees and helping to make new roads. He could not go long distances like the other men, as he felt constrained to come home every day or two to look after his mother and Rodman, but the work was too lucrative to be altogether refused.

With Waitstill's help he had at last overcome his mother's aversion to old Mrs. Mason, their nearest neighbor, and she, being now a widow with very slender resources, went to the

"Hurry up and don't make me stand here all winter!"

Boynton's several times each week to put the forlorn household a little on its feet.

It was all uphill and down to Ivory's farm, Waitstill reflected, and she could take her sled and slide half the way, going and coming, or she could cut across the frozen fields on the crust.

She caught up her shawl from a hook on the kitchen door, and, throwing it over her head and shoulders to shield herself from the chill blasts on the stairway, ran up to her bedroom to make herself ready for the walk knowledge? It seemed impossible. How had such a child surmounted difficulties in the path? Had she been led away by the attractions of so stranger? No, there had been none the village. There was only one who had the worldly wisdom or means to carry Patty off under every eye of her watchful sister, or one with the reckless courage to do her father, and that was Mark Wilson. His name did not bring absolute confidence to Waitstill's mind. He was young and thoughtless. How he managed to do this wild thing, had he done all decently and wisely with consideration for the girl's name?

The thought of all the risks lying the train of Patty's youth and inexperience brought a wail of anguish from Waitstill's lips, and, dropping beads and closing the drawer, she stumbled blindly down the stairway to the kitchen, intent upon one thought only—to find her sister, to look in her eyes, feel the touch of her hand, assure herself of her safety.

She gave a dazed look at the clock and was beginning to put on her cloak when the door opened and Patty entered the kitchen by way of the shed—the usual Patty—rosy, buoyant, alert, with a kind of childlike innocence that could hardly be associated with the possession of wedding rings.

"Are you going out, Waitstill? Well, for it's freezing cold. Waitstill, dear! What's the matter?" cried, coming closer to her sister alarm.

Waitstill's face had lost its clear color, and her eyes had the look of so dumb animal that has been struck and wounded. She sank into the flag-tomed rocker by the window and, leaning back her head, uttered no word but closed her eyes and gave one long shivering sigh and a dry sob that seemed drawn from the very bottom of her heart.

CHAPTER XXIII. The Confessional.

"WAITSTILL, I know what it is! you have found out about me! Who has been well enough to tell you before I could do so? Tell me—who?"

"Oh, Patty, Patty!" cried Waitstill who could no longer hold back tears. "How could you deceive me! How could you shut me out of your heart and keep a secret like this from me, who have tried to be mother and sister in one to you ever since the day you were born?"

"God has sent me much to bear, but nothing so bitter as this—to have sister take the greatest step of her life without my knowledge or counsel!"

"Stop, dear, stop, and let me tell you!"

"All is told, and not by you, as should have been. We've never anything separate from each other all our lives, and when I looked in your bureau drawer for a bit of soft cotton—it was nothing more than I have done a hundred times—you can guess what I stumbled upon—a wedding ring for a hand I have held ever since was a baby's. My sister has a hand, and I am not even sure of name!"

"Waitstill, Waitstill, don't take it so heart!" and Patty flung herself on her knees beside Waitstill's chair, "not you hear everything. When I tell you all you will dry your eyes and smile and be happy about me, and you will know that in the whole world there the miller's troubles and mine. I couldn't love anybody; I couldn't marry anybody who didn't feel that things at our house can't go on as they are. Father has had a good long trial. Three wives and two daughters have done their best to live with him and failed. I am not willing to die for him, as my mother did, nor have Waitstill killed if I can help it. Sometimes he is like a man who has lost his senses, and sometimes he is only grim and quiet and cruel. If he takes our marriage without a terrible scene, Mark, perhaps it will encourage Waitstill to break her chains as I have mine."

"There's sure to be an awful row," Mark said as one who had forecasted all the probabilities. "It wouldn't make any difference if you married the Prince of Wales; nothing would suit your father but selecting the man and making all the arrangements, and then he would never choose any one who wouldn't tend the store and work on the farm for him without wages."

"Waitstill will never run away. She isn't like me. She will sit and sit there, slaving and suffering, till doomsday, for the one that loves her isn't free like you."

"You mean Ivory Boynton? I believe he worships the ground she walks on. I like him better than I used, and I understand him better. Oh, but I'm a lucky young dog to have a kind, liberal father and a bit of money put by to do with as I choose. If I hadn't I'd be eating my heart out like Ivory."

"No, you wouldn't eat your heart out. You'd always get what you wanted somehow, and you wouldn't wait for it either, and I'm just the same. I'm not built for giving up and enduring and sacrificing. I'm naturally just a tuft of thistle-down. Mark, but, living beside Waitstill all these years, I've grown ashamed to be so light, blowing about like a tuft of thistle-down. Oh, if only she will forgive us, Mark, I won't mind what father says or does."

"She will forgive us, Patty, darling. Don't fret and cry and make your pretty eyes all red. I'll do nothing in all this to make either of you girls ashamed of me."

"Does the town clerk or does the justice of the peace give a wedding ring just like the minister?" Patty asked. "I shouldn't feel married without a ring."

"The ring is all ready and has 'M. W. to P. B.' engraved in it, with the place for the date waiting, and here is the engagement ring if you'll wear it when you're alone, Patty. My mother gave it to me when she thought there would be something between Annabel Franklin and me. The moment I looked at it—you see, it's a topaz stone—and noticed the yellow fire in it, I said to myself, 'It is like no one but Patty Baxter, and if she won't wear it no other girl shall.' It's the color of the tip ends of your curls, and it's just like the light in your eyes when you're making fun."

"It's heavenly!" cried Patty. "It looks as if it had been made of the yellow autumn leaves, and, oh, how I love the sparkle of it! But never will I take your mother's ring or wear it, Mark, till I've proved myself her loving, dutiful daughter. I'll do the one wrong thing of running away with you and concealing our marriage, but not another if I can help it."

"Very well," sighed Mark, replacing the ring in his pocket with a rather crestfallen air. "But the first thing you know you'll be too good for me, Patty. You used to be a regular will-o'-the-wisp—all nonsense and fun, forshoveling into the drifts of heaped up whiteness, tossing them to one side or the other and cutting a narrow, clean edged track that would pack down into the hardness of marble.

There were many "chores" to be done these cold mornings before any household could draw a breath of comfort. The Baxters kept but one cow in winter, killed the pig—not to eat, but to sell—and reduced the flock of hens and turkeys, but Waitstill was always as busy in the barn as in her own proper domain.

Her heart yearned for all the dumb creatures about the place, intervening between them and her father's scanty care, and when the thermometer descended far below zero she would be found stuffing hay into the holes and cracks of the barn and henhouse, giving the horse and cow fresh beddings of straw and a mouthful of extra food between the slender meals provided by the deacon.

It was 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and a fire in the Baxters' kitchen since 6 in the morning had produced a fairly temperate climate in that one room, though the entries and chambers might have been used for refrigerators, as the deacon was as parsimonious in the use of fuel as in all other things, and if his daughters had not been hardy young creatures, trained from their very birth to discomforts and exposures of every sort, they would have died long ago.

The Baxter kitchen shone and glittered in all its accustomed cleanliness and order. Scrubbing and polishing were cheap amusements and nobody grudged them to Waitstill. No tables in Riverboro were whiter, no tins more lustrous, no pewter brighter, no brick hearths reddier than hers. The beans and brown bread and Indian pudding were basking in the warmth of the old brick oven, and what with the crackle and sparkle of the fire, the gleam of the blue willow ware on the cupboard shelves, and the scarlet geraniums blooming on the sunny shelf above the sink, there were few pleasanter places to be found in the village than that same Baxter kitchen.

Yet Waitstill was ill at ease this afternoon; she hardly knew why. Her father had just put the horse into the pump and driven up to Milliken's mills for some grain, and Patty was down at the store instructing Bill Morrill (Cephas Cole's successor) in his novel task of waiting on customers and learning the whereabouts of things; no easy task in the bewildering variety of stock in a country store, where pines, treacle, gingham, epsom salts, Indian meal, shoestrings, shovels, brooms, sulphur, tobacco, suspenders, rum and indigo may be demanded in rapid succession.

Patty was quiet and docile these days, though her color was more brilliant than usual, and her eyes had all their accustomed sparkle. She went about her work steadily, neither ranting nor railing at fate, nor bewailing her lot, but even in this Waitstill felt a sense of change and difference too subtle to be put in words. She had noted Patty's summer flirtations, but regarded them indulgently, very much as if they had been the irresponsible friskings of a lamb in a meadow.

Waitstill had more than the usual reserve in these matters, for in New England at that time, though the soul was a subject of daily conversation, the heart was felt to be rather an indelicate topic to be alluded to as seldom as possible. Waitstill certainly would never have examined Patty Boyntons' several times each week to put the forlorn household a little on its feet.

It was all uphill and down to Ivory's farm, Waitstill reflected, and she could take her sled and slide half the way, going and coming, or she could cut across the frozen fields on the crust.

She caught up her shawl from a hook on the kitchen door, and, throwing it over her head and shoulders to shield herself from the chill blasts on the stairway, ran up to her bedroom to make herself ready for the walk.

She slipped on a quilted petticoat and a warmer dress, braided her hair freshly, while her breath went out in a white cloud to meet the freezing air; snatched her wraps from her closet, and was just going down the stairs, when she remembered that an hour before, having to bind up a cut finger for her father, she had searched Patty's bureau drawer for an old handkerchief, and had left things in disorder while she ran to answer the deacon's impatient call and stamp upon the kitchen floor.

"Hurry up and don't make me stan' here all winter!" he had shouted. "If you ever kept things in proper order you wouldn't have to hunt all over the house for a piece of rag when you need it!"

Patty was very dainty about her few patched and darned belongings; also very exact in the adjustment of her bits of ribbon, her collars of crocheted thread, her adored coral pendants and her pile of neat cotton handkerchiefs, hemstitched by her own hands. Waitstill, accordingly, with an exclamation at her own unwonted carelessness, darted into her sister's room to replace in perfect order the articles she had disarranged in her haste. She knew them all, these poor little trinkets—humble, pathetic evidences of Patty's feminine vanity and desire to make her bright beauty a trifle brighter.

Suddenly her hand and her eye fell at the same moment on something hidden in a far corner under a white "fascinator," one of those head coverings of filmy wool, dotted with beads, worn by the girls of the period. She drew the glittering, unfamiliar object forward and then lifted it wonderingly in her hand.

It was a string of burnished gold beads, the avowed desire of Patty's heart—a string of beads with a brilliant little stone in the fastening. And, as if that were not mystery enough, there was something slipped over the clasped necklace and hanging from it, as Waitstill held it up to the light—a circlet of plain gold, a wedding ring!

Waitstill stood motionless in the cold, with such a throng of bewildering thoughts, misgivings, imaginings, rushing through her head that they were like a flock of birds beating their wings against her ears. The imaginings were not those of absolute dread or terror, for she knew her Patty.

If she had seen the necklace alone she would have been anxious indeed, for it would have meant that the girl, urged on by ungovernable desire for the ornament, had accepted a present from one who should not have given it to her secretly. But the wedding ring meant something different for Patty—something more, something certain, something unescapable, for good or ill. A wedding ring could stand for nothing but marriage. Could Patty be married? How, when and where could so great a thing happen without her bureau drawer for a bit of soft cotton—it was nothing more than I have done a hundred times—you can guess now what I stumbled upon—a wedding ring for a band I have held ever since I was a baby's. My sister has a hus band, and I am not even sure of his name!"

"Walty, Walty, don't take it so to heart!" and Patty flung herself on her knees beside Waitstill's chair, "not till you hear everything. When I tell you all you will dry your eyes and smile and be happy about me, and you will know that in the whole world there is no one else in my love or my life but you and my—my husband!"

"Who is the husband?" asked Waitstill dryly as she wiped her eyes and leaned her elbow on the table.

"Who could it be but Mark? Has there ever been any one but Mark?"

"I should have said that there were several in these past few months."

Waitstill's tone showed clearly that she was still grieved and hurt beyond her power to conceal.

"I have never thought of marrying any one but Mark, and not even of marrying him till a little while ago," said Patty. "Now do not draw away from me and look out of the window as if we were not sisters or you will break my heart."

"Turn your eyes to mine and believe in me, Walty, while I tell you every thing, as I have so longed to do all these nights and days. Mark and I have loved each other for a long, long time. It was only play at first, but we were young and foolish and did not understand what was really happening between us."

"You are both of you only a few months older than when you were 'young and foolish,'" objected Waitstill.

"Yes, we are—years and years! Five weeks ago I promised Mark that I would marry him. But how was I ever to keep my word publicly? You have noticed how insultingly father treats him of late, passing him by without a word when he meets him in the street? You remember, too, that he has never gone to Lawyer Wilson for advice or put any business in his hands since spring?"

"The Wilsons are among father's aversions, that is all you can say. I is no use to try and explain them or rebel against them," Waitstill answered wearily.

"That is all very well and might be borne like many another cross, but I wanted to marry this particular 'aversion,'" argued Patty. "Would you have helped me to marry Mark secretly if I had confided in you?"

"Never in the world—never!"

"I knew it," exclaimed Patty triumphantly. "We both said so! And what was Mark to do? He was more than willing to come up here and ask for me like a man, but he knew that he would be ordered off the premises as if he were a thief. That would have angered Mr. and Mrs. Wilson and made matters worse. We talked and talked until we were hoarse; we thought and thought until we nearly had brain fever from thinking, but there seemed to be no way but to take the bull by the horns."

"You are both so young you could well have bided awhile."

"We could have bided until we were gray. Nothing would have changed father, and just lately I couldn't make Mark bide," confessed Patty ingenuously.

"He has been in a rage about father's treatment of you and me. He knowledge? It seemed impossible. How had such a child surmounted the difficulties in the path? Had she been ed away by the attractions of some stranger? No, there had been none in the village. There was only one man who had the worldly wisdom or the means to carry Patty off under the very eye of her watchful sister, only one with the reckless courage to defy her father, and that was Mark Wilson. How had he managed to do this wild thing, and had he done all decently and wisely, with consideration for the girl's good name?

The thought of all the risks lying in the train of Patty's youth and inexperience brought a wall of anguish from Waitstill's lips, and, dropping the ends and closing the drawer, she tumbled blindly down the stairway to the kitchen, intent upon one thought only—to find her sister, to look in her eyes, feel the touch of her hand and assure herself of her safety.

She gave a dazed look at the tall clock and was beginning to put on her coat when the door opened and Patty entered the kitchen by way of the side—the usual Patty—rosy, buoyant, alert, with a kind of childlike innocence that could hardly be associated with the possession of wedding rings. "Are you going out, Waity? Wrap up well, for it's freezing cold. Waity, Waity, dear! What's the matter?" she cried, coming closer to her sister in arm.

Waitstill's face had lost its clear color, and her eyes had the look of some dumb animal that has been struck and wounded. She sank into the flag-bottomed rocker by the window and, leaning back her head, uttered no word, it closed her eyes and gave one long, quivering sigh and a dry sob that seemed drawn from the very bottom of her heart.

CHAPTER XXIII. The Confessional.

WAITY, I know what it is—you have found out about me! Who has been wicked enough to tell you before I could do so? Tell me—who?" "Oh, Patty, Patty!" cried Waitstill, "I could no longer hold back her secrets. "How could you deceive me so?" "How could you shut me out of your heart and keep a secret like this from me, who have tried to be mother and sister in one to you ever since the day you were born?"

My sister has a husband, and I am not even sure of his name!"

Waity, Waity, don't take it so to heart!" and Patty flung herself on her knees beside Waitstill's chair. "Don't tell me anything. When I tell you you will dry your eyes and smile at me, and you will tell me that in the whole world there is no one else in my love or my life but knows we haven't the right food to eat, nothing fit to wear, and not an hour of peace or freedom. He has even heard the men at the store say that our very lives might be in danger if we crossed father's will or angered him beyond a certain point.

"You can't blame a man who loves a girl, if he wants to take her away from such a wretched life. His love would be good for nothing if he did not long to rescue her!"

"I would never have left you behind to bear your slavery alone, while I slipped away to happiness and comfort—not for any man alive would I have done it!" This speech, so unlike Waitstill in its ungenerous reproach, was repented of as soon as it left her tongue. "Oh, I did not mean that, my darling!" she cried. "I would have welcomed any change for you and thanked God for it, if only it could have come honorably and aboveboard."

"But, don't you see, Waity, how my marriage helps everything? That is what makes me happiest; that now I shall have a home and it can be yours."

"Father has plenty of money and can get a housekeeper. He is only sixty-five, and as hale and hearty as a man can be. You have served your time, and surely you need not be his drudge for the rest of your life. Mark and I thought you would spend half the year with us."

Waitstill waived this point as too impossible for discussion. "When and where were you married, Patty?" she asked.

"In Allentown, N. H., last Monday, the day you and father went to Saco. Ellen went with us. You needn't suppose it was much fun for me! Girls that think running away to be married is nothing but a lark do not have to deceive a sister like you nor have a father such as mine to reckon with afterward."

"You thought of all that before, didn't you, child?"

"Nobody that hasn't already run away to be married once or twice could tell how it was going to feel. Never did I pass so unhappy a day. If Mark was not everything that is kind and gentle he would have tipped me out of the sleigh into a snowbank and left me by the roadside to freeze."

"I might have been murdered instead of only married by the way I behaved, but Mark and Ellen understood. Then the very next day Mark's father sent him up to Bridgton on business, and he had to go to Allentown first to return a friend's horse, so he couldn't break the news to father at once, as he intended."

"Does a New Hampshire marriage hold good in Maine?" asked Waitstill, still intent on the bare facts at the bottom of the romance.

"Well, of course," stammered Patty, somewhat confused. "Maine has her own way of doing things and wouldn't be likely to fancy New Hampshire's. But nothing can make it wicked or anything but according to law."

"Besides, Mark considered all the difficulties. He is wonderfully clever, and he has a clerkship in a Portsmouth law office waiting for him, and that's where we are going to live, in New Hampshire, where we were married, and my darling sister will come soon and stay months and months with us."

"When is Mark coming back to arrange all this?"

"Late tonight or early tomorrow morning."

"Where did you go after you were married?"

when he hears that you are married; not to know whether your new family will like or despise you and to have your only sister angered with you for the first time in her life."

Waitstill's heart melted, and she lifted Patty's tear-stained face to hers and kissed it. "Well, dear, I would not have had you do this for the world, but it is done, and Mark seems to have been as wise as a man can be when he does an unwise thing. You are married, and you love each other. That's the comforting thing to me."

"We do," sobbed Patty. "No two people ever loved each other better than we, but it's been all spoiled for fear of father."

"I must say I dread to have him hear the news," and Waitstill knitted her brows anxiously. "I hope it may be soon, and I think I ought to be here when he is told. Mark will never understand or bear with him, and there may be trouble that I could avert."

"I'll be here, too, and I'm not afraid," and Patty raised her head defiantly. "Father can't unmarry us; that's why we acted in this miserable, secret, underhanded way. Somehow, though I haven't seen Mark since we went to Allentown, I am braver than I was last week, for now I've got somebody to take my part."

"I've a good mind to go upstairs and put on my gold beads and my wedding ring just to get used to them and to feel a little more married. No, I can't after all, for there is father driving up the hill now, and he may come into the house. What brings him home at this hour?"

"I was expecting him every moment," and Waitstill rose and stirred the fire. "He took the pump and went to the mills for grain."

"He hasn't anything in the back of the pump—and, oh, Waity, he is standing up now and whipping the horse with all his might. I never saw him drive like that before! What can be the matter? He can't have seen my wedding ring, and only three people in all the world know about my being married."

Waitstill turned from the window, her heart beating a little faster. "What three people know three hundred are likely to know sooner or later. It may be a false alarm, but father is in a fury about something. He must not be told the news until he is in a better humor!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

Patty Is Shown the Door.

DEACON BAXTER drove into the barn and, dinging a blanket over the wheezing horse, closed the door behind him and hurried into the house without even thinking to lay down his whip.

Opening the kitchen door and stopping outside long enough to kick the snow from his heavy boots, he strode into the kitchen and confronted the two girls. He looked at them sharply before he spoke, scanning their flushed faces and tear-stained eyes; then he broke out savagely:

"Oh, you're both here; that's lucky. Now stan' up and answer to me. What's this I hear at the Mills about Patience—common talk outside the store?"

The time had come, then, and by some strange fatality when Mark was too far away to be of service.

"Tell me what you heard, father, and I can give you a better answer," Patty replied, hedging to gain time and shaking inwardly.

"Bill Morrill says his brother that works in New Hampshire reports you worthless trollop, you? Who went along with you? I'll skin the hide off him, whoever 't was!"

Patty remained mute at this threat, but Waitstill caught her hand and whispered: "Tell him all, dear. It's got to come out. Be brave, and I'll stand by you."

"Why are you interferin' and puttin' in your meddlesome oar?" the deacon said, turning to Waitstill. "The girl would never 'a' been there if you'd attended to your business. She's nothin' but a fool of a young filly, an' you're an old cart horse. It was your job to look out for her, as your mother told you to. Anybody might 'a' guessed she needed watchin'!"

"You shall not call my sister an old cart horse! I'll not permit it!" cried Patty, plucking up courage in her sister's defense and, as usual, comporting herself a trifle more like a spitfire than a true heroine of tragedy.

"Hush, Patty! Let him call me anything that he likes. It makes no difference at such a time."

"Waitstill knew nothing of my going away till this afternoon," continued Patty. "I kept it secret from her on purpose, because I was afraid she would not approve. I went with Mark Wilson, and—and I married him in New Hampshire because we couldn't do it at home without everybody's knowledge. Now you know all!"

"Do you mean to tell me you've gone an' married that reckless, wuthless, horse trottin', card playin' sneak of a Wilson boy, that's courted every girl in town? Married the son of a man that has quarreled with me and insulted me in public? By the Lord Harry, I'll crack this whip over your shoulders once before I'm done with you! If I'd used it years ago you might have been an honest woman today instead of a—"

was nothing more than I have done a hundred times—you can guess now that I stumbled upon—a wedding ring or a hand I have held ever since it was a baby's. My sister has a husband, and I am not even sure of his time!"

"Walty, Walty, don't take it so to heart!" and Patty flung herself on her knees beside Waitstill's chair, "not till you hear everything. When I tell you I you will dry your eyes and smile and be happy about me, and you will know that in the whole world there is no one else in my love or my life but you and my—my husband!"

"Who is the husband?" asked Waitstill dryly as she wiped her eyes and and her elbow on the table.

"Who could it be but Mark? Has there ever been any one but Mark?" I should have said that there were several in these past few months."

Waitstill's tone showed clearly that she was still grieved and hurt beyond her power to conceal.

"I have never thought of marrying any one but Mark, and not even of marrying him till a little while ago," said Patty. "Now do not draw away from me and look out of the window if we were not sisters or you will break my heart."

"Turn your eyes to mine and believe me, Walty, while I tell you everything, as I have so longed to do all these nights and days. Mark and I have loved each other for a long, long time. It was only play at first, but we were young and foolish and did not understand what was really happening between us."

"You are both of you only a few months older than when you were young and foolish," objected Waitstill.

"Yes, we are—years and years! Five weeks ago I promised Mark that I would marry him. But how was I ever to keep my word publicly? You have noticed how insultingly father treats him of late, passing him by without a word when he meets him in the street? You remember, too, that has never gone to Lawyer Wilson for advice or put any business in his hands since spring?"

The Wilsons are among father's relations, that is all you can say. It is no use to try and explain them or rebel against them," Waitstill answered wearily.

That is all very well and might be like many another cross, but I intend to marry this particular 'average,' argued Patty. "Would you have helped me to marry Mark secretly if I had confided in you?"

Never in the world—never!"

I knew it," exclaimed Patty triumphantly. "We both said so! And what was Mark to do? He was more than willing to come up here and ask me like a man, but he knew that would be ordered off the premises if he were a thief. That would have angered Mr. and Mrs. Wilson and made matters worse. We talked and talked till we were hoarse; we thought and thought until we nearly had brain fever from thinking, but there seemed to be no way but to take the bull by the nose."

You are both so young you could have bided awhile."

We could have bided until we were 7. Nothing would have changed over, and just lately I couldn't make a bid," confessed Patty ingenuously.

He has been in a rage about father's treatment of you and me. He feels that he is wonderfully clever, and he has a clerkship in a Portsmouth law office waiting for him, and that's where we are going to live, in New Hampshire, where we were married, and my darling sister will come soon and stay months and months with us."

"When is Mark coming back to arrange all this?"

"Late tonight or early tomorrow morning."

"Where did you go after you were married?"

"Where did I go?" echoed Patty in a childish burst of tears. "Where could I go? It took all day to be married—all day long, working and driving hard from sunrise to 7 o'clock in the evening. Then when we reached the bridge Mark dropped me, and I walked up home in the dark and went to bed without any supper for fear that you and father would come back and catch me at it and ask why I was so late."

"My poor, foolish dear!" sighed Waitstill.

Patty's tears flowed faster at the first sound of sympathy in Waitstill's voice, for self pity is very enfeebling. She fairly sobbed as she continued:

"So my only wedding journey was the freezing drive back from Allentown, with Ellen crying all the way and wishing that she hadn't gone with us. Mark and I both say we'll never be married again so long as we live."

"Where have you seen your husband from that day to this?"

"I haven't laid eyes on him," said Patty, with a fresh burst of woe. "I have a certificate thing and a wedding ring and a beautiful frock and hat that Mark bought in Boston, but no real husband. I'm no more married than ever I was. Don't you remember I said that Mark was sent away on Tuesday morning? And this is Thursday! I've had three letters from him, but I don't know till we see how father takes it when we can tell the Wilsons and start for Portsmouth."

"We shan't really call ourselves married till we get to Portsmouth. We promised each other that from the first. It isn't much like being a bride never to see your bridegroom; to have a father who will fly into a passion

"Bill Morrill says his brother that works in New Hampshire reports you as ridin' through the streets of Allentown last Monday with a young man."

There seemed but one reply to this, so Patty answered tremblingly: "He says what's true. I was there."

"What!" And it was plain from the deacon's voice that he had really disbelieved the rumor. A whirlwind of rage swept through him and shook him from head to foot.

"Do you mean to stan' there an' own up to me that you was thirty miles away from home with a young man?" he shouted.

"If you ask me a plain question I've got to tell you the truth, father. I was."

Modernize your Kitchen

One by one the bugbears of housekeeping are being put to rout through the instrumentality of gas. The modern kitchen—which means the all-gas kitchen—is now a recognized part of the up-to-date home. The all-gas kitchen lightens labor. It means a clean, wholesome, sanitary kitchen, as there is no coal dust or ashes to be spread around, and it becomes a real pleasure to work in it. Every housewife desires to cook and heat water in the most economical way, in the quickest, most dependable way, with the least possible work.

The All-Gas way is the solution to the problem.

The hot weather is here now and if you want a cool, comfortable kitchen this summer come and select your Gas Range and Water Heater now. We have ranges at all prices.

DO LIGHTNING RODS PROTECT?

How They Should Be Installed to Be of Practical Benefit.
[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

Unquestionably lightning rods properly installed and properly grounded are very useful, but to insure absolute safety it would be necessary for one to surround his house with metal network. This is, of course, impossible in practice. On the other hand, a reasonably efficient and satisfactory system can be installed by any one with small expense and trouble.

For ordinary purposes good protection is afforded by a conductor running along the ridge of a building and extending to the earth, either at the middle of the sides or preferably at each of the four corners. The points the roof to the ground. In general it will be found most convenient to make this path by joining the waterspout to the ground. As in the case of all ground connections, however, this must be done with the greatest care.

A building with its rods properly placed, with iron conductors properly grounded, should, if struck, escape in jury.

BEST TIME TO SEED GRASSES.

Nature ripens grass seeds in the summer. They fall to earth and lie dormant till rains of fall cause them to spring into growth.

Commonly the fall is the best time to sow grass seeds. One should not sow the seed until the ground is sufficiently full of moisture so that if the seeds germinate they will not perish for lack of support.

Time of seeding varies with location and season. In the fall one can sow grass seeds from August to November, with the best chances of success probably about the middle of September.

In the spring one can hardly sow the seed too early. Certainly as soon as one can get a seed bed one must put in the seed, and in spring seeding one cannot and need not delay so long to perfect a seed bed as in the fall.—Joseph E. Wing in "Meadows and Pastures."

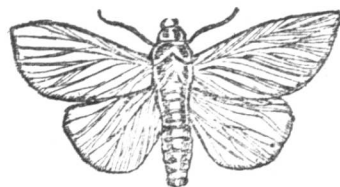

LOOK FOR ARMY WORM MOTHS

Department of Agriculture Requests Public Aid in Fighting Pest.

Every one interested in the destruction of the army worm pest is being requested by the United States department of agriculture to look out for army worm moths with one artificially colored wing. The department's entomologists are catching army worm moths where they are plentiful, coloring one wing of each and then liberating them in the same territory, so that they may determine whether these moths fly directly west or north and how quickly and far they will spread. A better knowledge of the habits of this pest should enable the department to control its spread. No moths are to be let loose where their liberation could possibly add to the natural damage.

The moths have shown themselves in Virginia and in Maryland, and the department's agents are catching specimens at Portsmouth and Charlottesville, in Virginia, and Hagerstown, in Maryland. The agents at Portsmouth are applying a red stain to one wing of each specimen caught, those at Charlottesville a black or yellow stain and those at Hagerstown a violet color. Then the moths are left to follow the natural course they would have pursued.

"Look for the army worm moth with a colored wing," the department's bureau of entomology is advising its agents east of the Mississippi. Any one observing a marked specimen will aid in the campaign by reporting the fact to the bureau of entomology.

HINTS ON JAM MAKING.

Use only fruit which has been gathered dry. Wet fruit prevents the jam from keeping and is often the cause of mold.

Fruit should be boiled as soon as possible after being gathered.

Always use the best sugar and in the right proportions. Cheap sugar is unsatisfactory and is no economy, resulting in no saving.

As a general rule one pound of fruit requires one pound of sugar, but this varies slightly with the amount and kind of fruit.

Always use a copper or china lined pan and stir with a wooden spoon.

The fruit must be boiled quickly and stirred frequently if the color and flavor are to be of the best.

Overboiling destroys both color and flavor. Half an hour to forty minutes is long enough to boil most jams.

Store, if possible, in glass jars, so that any sign of fermentation or mold may be detected.

Jams must be stored in a cool, dry cupboard.

If the fruit is preferred whole boil a sirup before adding the fruit.

Color Hints.

The tendency at present is very largely in favor of dark colors, says the Dry Goods Economist, navy blue and brown being particularly desirable. There has also been more interest shown in black than for a number of years. Dark shades of green are being used to a considerable extent, but even for opening pieces there have been fewer light colors shown than for a number of seasons. When light shades are employed sand and putty colors are being taken.

T CONNECTIONS FOR LIGHTNING RODS.

should rise above any prominent features of the building, such as chimneys, in the absence of these features, from the ridge of the roof at intervals of twenty-five feet or thereabouts.

Because of its availability and cheapness iron is one of the best materials for conductors. It must, however, be galvanized, and the rod should be of large size, not less than a quarter of an inch in diameter. A cheap and convenient form for barns and small buildings is a two strand cable galvanized iron fence wire, of the same style as barbed wire, but without the barbs, which merely make it more difficult to handle without serving any useful purpose. Copper and aluminium are also in general use, but they are both more expensive than iron. On the other hand, they require less frequent inspection and repairs. If the first cost, therefore, is a matter of prime importance iron should be used; otherwise copper or aluminium may well be preferred.

No matter what material is selected, it is of the utmost importance that the rods should be thoroughly grounded in moist earth. An ungrounded lightning rod is a menace instead of protection. The conductor should be carried down into the earth and away from the building in a trench or other excavation and end in permanently moist earth.

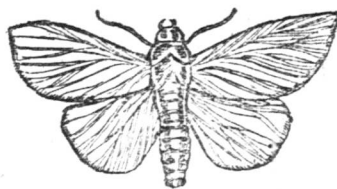

Sometimes it is possible to connect the lightning rod with water pipes or other metal work that is connected, in turn, with moist earth. Insulators are entirely unnecessary. Periodical inspection and careful maintenance are, however, indispensable.

From time to time various claims are made for special forms of lightning conductors and points. It is safe to say that the vast majority of these pretensions are unfounded on fact. A satisfactory conductor can be formed of a solid rod, a flat bar or band, a twisted cable, a woven stranded ribbon or a hollow, twisted cable. As for points, money spent on elaborate or fanciful construction is largely wasted. Stout, bluntly pointed iron rods three-eighths or one-half inch in diameter, rigidly and securely fastened so as to protect one and one-half or two feet above the structure to which they are attached, will satisfy all requirements. Such substantial iron points, in combination with copper cables from five-sixteenths of an inch diameter for small farm buildings to one-half inch for large, important structures, form one of the best possible systems of conductors.

As far as possible, conductors should be put up in long, continuous pieces. When it becomes necessary to connect two rods this should be done by means of T connections. These connections, like the rods themselves, should be galvanized in order to protect them from corrosive influences of the atmosphere. The wires or rods should be fastened to the building by galvanized iron staples about one inch long.

Buildings with metal roofs are all ready partially protected. It is how ever desirable to see that there is an unbroken metal path from the ridge of a colored wing." The department's bureau of entomology is advising its agents east of the Mississippi. Any one observing a marked specimen will aid in the campaign by reporting the fact to the bureau of entomology.

THE ARMY WORM MOTH.

Washington. When its presence has been noted the moth should be destroyed.

The wings of the army worm moth when outspread measure about one and a half inches from tip to tip. The body is about half this length. The general shape of the moth with its wings outspread is triangular. The moths will hover about the lights in the evening. On farms they will be found on the outside of screens and doors at night. They will probably not be observed in the daytime. On dark, hot, close nights, such as precede thunderstorms, they will probably be especially noticeable.

The army worm pest has caused considerable damage to the crops and lawns during the summer throughout the northern United States east of the Mississippi. The worms are only now disappearing in northern Maine and Michigan which were probably hatched from the eggs of moths migrating from more southern parts of the country. With the additional knowledge that this experiment will give, the department hopes to control the spread of the pest more completely in coming years.

SINKING SHIPS.

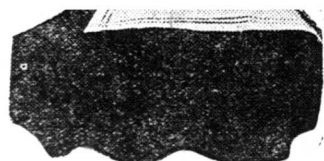

If Completely Submerged They Must Go to the Bottom.

Answering a correspondent who writes: "I am very anxious to find out whether a ship will sink if the bottom of the ocean is at great depth or, at least, at such depth that the weight of the water would be greater than the weight of the ship. It is the opinion of many that at a certain depth the ship would remain suspended instead of sinking to the bottom. Please explain the exact truth of the matter," Edgar Lucien Larkin in the New York American says:

"Any mass that will entirely sink below the surface of the ocean will sink to the bottom of any sea or ocean on earth. This is because water is almost incompressible.

"Enormous pressure in hydraulic presses has been made upon distilled and also upon sea water, and the diminution of volume—that is, increase of density—is only 0.000044 for ocean water for each atmosphere, i. e., each addition of fifteen pounds to each square inch. Then water soaked wood would be increased in density by very nearly the same amount.

"Hence if all of the wood in a wooden ship sinks below the surface it must go to the bottom. The question of reaching the bottom of the ocean is decided for any kind of matter of any ship or boat by its behavior at the surface. If all of the material of the boat sinks at all below the surface, then it will fall to the bottom of any sea, there being such a slight increase in density of water at the bottom of the deepest ocean."

Striking and graceful in line are many of the new autumn collars. Note the specimen illustrated. It is an eccentrically shaped new collar of handkerchief linen trimmed with two lines of hemstitching designed to wear with autumn coats or trotter frocks of serge or mohair.

GIFTS TO GIVE THE INVALID

A canary would chirrup many a weary hour away.

A pretty, lacy boudoir cap would be appreciated by a woman.

A pine or rose petal pillow would afford refreshing fragrance.

An electric flashlight within reach at night is almost indispensable.

A tea wagon to wheel up beside the bed would vary the meal service pleasantly.

A food warming plate such as is used for babies would keep a cup of bouillon warm.

An Indian blanket would keep off many a draft and make a varying temperature unnoticeable.

An attractive rose bowl or long stemmed vase would lend its charm to the invalid's bouquets.

The sick person appreciates many changes of cheery bath robes, negligees and dainty fancy slippers.

A night bottle with a glass tipped over it and a spoonful of cordial in the stopper would be handy in case of a chill.

A prettily lined and ribbon bedecked box, filled with the patient's favored toilet preparations, is practical, dainty and very acceptable.

One of the new cache nightgowns of chiffon would be very convenient to slip into to take a meal or when an unexpected guest arrives.

A vacuum bottle would bring comfort, and some hot water bags have such beautiful covers that they are pleasing as well as useful.

Tomatoes picked when just ripe and firm and attached to the stems are said to keep indefinitely with little loss of freshness if covered with brine made by dissolving a teaspoonful of salt in a gallon of pure, fresh water. Place them in an earthen vessel. A mixture of water and vinegar will also keep them fresh for a long time.

TRANSPARENCIES.

Pretty Window Pictures From Flowers, Ferns and Leaves.

ANYBODY CAN MAKE THEM.

Materials Are Inexpensive, and With a Little Taste and Skill Charming Decorative Souvenirs of Woodland Walks May Thus Be Made.

When you are out walking you often find beautiful leaves, ferns or delicate flowers that you wish you could keep. There is a way to do this that requires no special skill.

Smooth out each tiny leaflet of a fern so that its shape will be perfect. Press it between newspapers and change them daily for the first few days.

The materials that you will need to make transparencies are a sheet of Japanese paper, either gray or brown or a dull shade of green, a jar of paste and a pair of scissors.

After your fern is pressed you must decide upon the shape of the picture that you wish. For an oblong, which is perhaps the best, cut two pieces of the Japanese paper of the same size, large enough to cover the fern and leave a quarter of an inch margin around the four sides. Paste the fern lightly to one of these pieces of Japanese paper, being careful to make it lie perfectly flat and smooth. It is a good plan to use very little paste, just enough to make the fern stick fast to the paper. On top of the fern is placed the second piece of Japanese paper, which is glued to the first piece of paper around the outer edge. Here you have your picture ready to be framed.

The next point to be decided is what color frame you will use. Perhaps you will decide on a dull gray, finding that it blends in very well with the delicate, tender green of the young fern. Again you cut two equal oblongs of the colored paper about two inches wider and longer than the oblongs of the Japanese paper. Cut out the centers of these oblongs, and the space thus made must be a quarter of an inch smaller, both in width and length, than the picture. You will notice that when you lay the frame on top of the picture it will cover the extra quarter of an inch of Japanese paper, or, in other words, the frame will overlap the picture a quarter of an inch. Paste the frame firmly to the picture around this center opening and then, turning the picture over, paste down the second piece of colored paper in the same way, so that your picture will be framed exactly alike on both sides.

Now, after the outer edges of the frame have been glued together the picture will be complete. By adding a bit of gray ribbon by which to hang it up your transparency is ready to be hung in the window.

You can make all sorts of transparencies, of all shapes and sizes, using dainty, delicately colored flowers or thin feathery grasses or some little leaves—anything, in fact, that is flat and can be pasted between the two pieces of transparent Japanese paper. Often ferns with just one gayly colored flower will make a beautiful transparency.

OCCUPATIONS FOR WOMEN.

Great Increase in the Number Which They May Enter.

Miss Mary S. Snow, research secretary of the New York intercollegiate bureau of occupations, says that many occupations are open to women where once upon a time there was only teaching.

She says that some form of social work seems to be the most attractive occupation for the college graduate. Many girls want to go into libraries, and curator of museums is a rather new occupation for women.

Other occupations open to women are that of laundry overseer, landscape gardener, dieticians, social secretaries, farm managers, interior decorators and assistants, photographers, chemists and bacteriologists.

When to Drink Water.

Water taken half an hour before eating has been found most beneficial. It dissolves and helps to carry off any mucus or other matter in the stomach, the presence of which is prejudicial. This mucus mixes with the food, covers it over and keeps the gastric juice from it for a short time.

The general opinion is that it is not wise to drink too much at mealtime. A moderate quantity of fluid taken does no harm, but if it is used to wash down the food before mastication it does a positive injury.

It may be stated that very cold water at mealtime ought not to be taken by delicate persons, though they may take it in small quantities at a time when the stomach is empty.

Hot water will be found very beneficial to dyspeptics a half an hour or so before eating. It warms the stomach, brings more blood to it, cleanses it of foul matter and mucus and in many ways produces a good effect.

Dark Colors For Fall.

Colors for fall and winter are to be dark, except in separate waists and evening gowns, says the Dry Goods Economist. Large use is made of black and of black and white. The colors for morning and afternoon wear are navy, tete de negre and green, with a strong representation of black.

In the separate waists and evening gowns tangerine, abshuth, gold, maize, French blue, wistaria and empire green are represented.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

Hundreds of People Have Found "Fruit-a-tives" Their Only Help

READ THIS LETTER

Superintendent of Sunday School in Toronto Tells How He Cured Himself of Chronic Rheumatism After Suffering for Years.

55 DOVERCOURT ROAD, Oct., 1st, 1913.

"For a long time, I have thought of writing you regarding what I term a most remarkable cure effected by your remedy 'Fruit-a-tives'. I suffered from Rheumatism, especially in my hands. I have spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken 'Fruit-a-tives' for 18 months now, and am pleased to tell you that I am cured. All the enlargement has not left my hands and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in 18 months".

R. A. WAUGH

Rheumatism is no longer the dreaded disease it once was. Rheumatism is no longer one of the "incurable diseases". "Fruit-a-tives" has proved its marvellous powers over Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago—in fact, over all such diseases which arise from some derangement of stomach, bowels, kidneys or skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Treating a Corn.

Whether a corn is treated at home or by a chiropodist, the treatment is the same. It consists of applying to the surface an acid (the most commonly used being salicylic) mixed with collodion and ether. The ether evaporates, leaving a layer of collodion to hold the acid while this does its work. After applying this regularly for four or five days the foot is soaked in hot water, when the corn can be picked out in one piece, leaving a hole, which quickly fills up. Some chiropodists eat the corn out by repeated applications of nitric acid, picking away the parts of the corn destroyed at each treatment. Every time you cut a corn yourself you run the risk of blood poisoning.—New York World.

What a wealth of money-saving opportunities are yours with such a Catalogue as this to choose from. "Business as Usual" is its motto, and "Values Better than Usual" might aptly be applied to the long list of dependable merchandise it has to offer. There is no upheaval of prices evident throughout the three hundred and more pages, and the marvel of it all is that orders come in and go out with the same promptness as of yore. Unmistakable savings are evident on every page, coupled with quality merchandise and service that bespeak assured satisfaction to the purchaser, and so it is at this time that we remind you of the coming Christmas season. The old traditions must prevail, and good fellowship be maintained. Gifts will soon be the order of the day, and what better choice could one wish for than that which you will find in your EATON Catalogue? But with this suggestion there also comes this note of warning: Don't delay ordering. To do justice to all concerned it is absolutely necessary that you order early. The folly of it is that many delay their Christmas purchase until the last moment, and in the hurry and bustle some unforeseen disappointment oftentimes occurs. Make up your mind to run no such risk as this. See that you make your selections early, and be convinced of this, that we, on our part, will render such service as will win your hearty approval.

CANADA'S WORD.

O Canada! A voice calls through the mist and spume

Across the wide, wet, salty leagues of foam

For aid. Whose voice thus penetrates thy peace?

Whose? Thy Mother's, Canada, Thy Mother's voice.

O Canada! A drum beats through the night and day,

Unresting, eager, strident, summoning To arms. Whose drum thus throbs persistent?

Whose? Old England's, Canada, Old England's drum.

O Canada! A sword gleams leaping swift to strike

At foes that press and leap to kill brave men

On guard. Whose sword thus gleams fierce death?

Whose? 'Tis Britain's, Canada, Great Britain's sword.

O Canada! A prayer beats hard at Heaven's gate,

Tearing the heart wide open to God's eye,

For righteousness. Whose prayer thus pierces Heaven?

Whose? 'Tis God's prayer, Canada, Thy Kingdom come?

O Canada! What answer make to calling voice and beating drum,

To sword-gleam and to pleading prayer of God

For right? What answer makes my soul?

"Mother, to thee! God, to Thy help! Quick! My sword!"

Trinity Church Notes.

Mr. McLean, principal of the Collegiate Institute, gave a very interesting and able address on "Citizenship" at the meeting of the Young People's Association on Monday evening. The Official Board, at its meeting on Monday evening, requested the pastor to introduce the responsive reading of the Scriptures at the morning service in accordance with the Discipline of the Church. Rev. Dr. Hazelwood, who preaches on Sunday evening, in the interests of Temperance and Moral Reform, delivered a most inspiring address on Temperance at the recent session of Conference held in Trinity church. Be sure and hear Dr. Hazelwood. The Young Peoples' Association has engaged Rev. Byron H. Stauffer, the popular pastor of Bond street Congregational Church, Toronto, to deliver a lecture on Monday evening, Nov. 23rd. This will be a great treat. Mr. Stauffer is regarded as the most popular preacher in Toronto. The choir will render a choice programme of music on Sunday next.

Tuberculosis Sunday.

Tuberculosis Sunday is the 29th of November this year, to be followed by Tuberculosis Day in the schools, Monday, November 30th. Preparations are again being made to hold Tuberculosis Sunday in the Churches throughout the Province. This is the third year of the movement in Canada. By sermons and lectures, the National Sanitarium Association, operating the hospitals for consumptives at Muskoka and Weston, will enlist hundreds of Churches and schools throughout Ontario in a simultaneous educational movement against tuberculosis on 29th and 30th November. The Ministerial Associations and heads of all denominations will be asked to co-operate again this year, as in former years. The Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, has again approved of holding Tuberculosis Day in the schools on Monday, November 30th, following Tuberculosis Sunday in the Churches. The Minister will again send to the teachers throughout the Province a circular carrying his endorsement of the movement. Outlines of sermons or lectures, on tuberculosis, will be distributed, upon request to Ministers or teachers, from the headquarters of the National Sanitarium Association, 34 Ross street, Toronto.

LETTER FROM A NAPANEE SOLDIER

Divisional Signal Coy,
West Down South,
Salisbury Plain,
October 22nd, 1914.

Dear Mother—Have just come in off a 6 mile ride on a bicycle and the rain is coming down in torrents. Had a message to take and it took me over two hours to deliver it, the roads were so sloppy. The roads in dry weather are the finest I ever saw, so hard and level, but in wet weather the dust makes them very slippery. Well it is morning now as I was too tired to finish this last night. When I came in last night from my message everything I wore was soaked through and my jacket is still too wet to wear.

You can see by the heading that I am seeing a little of England. Sent several letters and cards to you when I was aboard ship which I hope you got all O.K. The country around here is nothing but small hills and on a dry day you can see for about ten miles. There is a village about two miles from this camp where about 2000 years ago they used to sacrifice young girls to the Druid Gods and although I have not been there those who have say it is extremely interesting. We just came in to camp Monday morning after marching from 2 a.m., Sunday morning until 7 a.m., Monday. During this five hours we marched about 12 miles and the day before (Sunday) we made about 8 miles, marching about Devenport near Plymouth. The ground here is very grassy, just long enough to make a nice bed in dry weather, but long enough to soak ones boots in wet weather. The papers over here say the Kaiser intends to fight to a finish so you can see that it may be years before I get back home unless I get invalided on sick leave. We will doubtless live in huts this winter and go into the campaign in the spring. If you care to go to the trouble would you please get me a pair of yarn gloves and wristlets as my hands get very cold sometimes. The army is supposed to furnish them but our company is only entitled to 174 men, but it has about 30 odd men and these have to go without the things the other men have to have and I happen to be one of these.

Wrote Miss Anderson a good long letter when I was on board and put something in it to give to you, just a souvenir of the Andania. Hoping you are all as well as I am, except for a slight cold after the soaking I got last night. I think I have said everything except that I still think that this life agrees with me for I am getting fat and much healthier. Am going to take a few holidays and go to London as travelling is very cheap here. Well as I have some more time will try and finish this letter. It is about 8 p.m. now and as my days work is done, am taking a few moments to finish this letter before rolling in for the night. It is much warmer here than at Valcartier and if I take care of myself had ought to stand the weather this winter very well.

England is everything that I expected it to be, very old fashioned but a fine place to visit. If I get along safe to the end of this war I would like to bring you over here when things have settled down. The news we get here is very inadmature, but I guess the Germans are getting the worst of it. Well Mother, I guess you have no kick coming as to the length of this letter, and as I have

IMPORT REGULATIONS RESPECTING NURSERY STOCK.

All persons importing trees, shrubs and other plants, collectively known as "nursery stock" into Canada are required to observe the regulations of the Dominion Department of Agriculture which govern such importations. These regulations, passed under the Destructive Insect and Pest Act, prescribe the conditions under which plants may be imported; special conditions are attached to certain classes of plants, some classes are subject to inspection, others to fumigation. In order that all importers may learn what are the conditions governing the importations of trees and plants in Canada, a circular entitled "Instructions to importers of trees, plants and other nursery stock in Canada" has been published as Entomological Circular No. 4 by the Department of Agriculture and all persons wishing to import plants into Canada should apply to the Publication Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, for a copy of this circular which will be sent free to all applicants.

"GOOD-BYE, TORONTO! ADIEU, MONTREAL."

H. R. Gordon, of the Queen's Own, is now a mere gun-bearing unit of the overseas force. Before he left he was a most observant newspaper man, and this is how he sizes up the difference between Hans and Tommy, in the November CANADA MONTHLY:

"There are two kinds of soldiers in this war. The German brand is a carefully polished bit of mechanism in a great steam roller. His thought is censored to the point of annihilation, his initiative is deliberately drilled out of him. Von Kluck and the Kaiser will think for him, just as they think for the Reichstag.

"The British soldier—above all the Overseas Empire-defender—is just plain Bob Robinson in khaki instead of blue serge, handling a gun in place of a place of a plough or a pencil—same Bob as he used to be—same song, same slang, same girl down home to write to. He's earning one ten a day in place of two or three or five, not because a conscription officer rang his front door bell and wouldn't listen when his mother said he was ill, but because he's a soldier."

—Aments to finish this letter before rolling in for the night. It is much warmer here than at Valcartier and if I take care of myself had ought to stand the weather this winter very well.

England is everything that I expected it to be, very old fashioned but a fine place to visit. If I get along safe to the end of this war I would like to bring you over here when things have settled down. The news we get here is very inadequate, but I guess the Germans are getting the worst of it. Well Mother, I guess you have no kick coming as to the length of this letter, and as I have told you everything I think I will say Good-bye to all of you.

With love from your son,

a great Reichstag. His thought is censored to the point of annihilation, his initiative is deliberately drilled out of him. Von Kluck and the Kaiser will think for him, just as they think for the Reichstag.

"The British soldier—above all the Overseas Empire-defender—is just plain Bob Robinson in khaki instead of blue serge, handling a gun in place of a place of a plough or a pencil—same Bob as he used to be—same song, same slang, same girl down home to write to. He's earning one-tenth a day in place of two or three or five, not because a conscription officer rang his front door bell and wouldn't listen when his mother said he was ill, but because he stood in line for two hours, waiting for the chance to volunteer.

"This war will see the last of one soldier-type or the other. If the Kaiser's swamp France with his unhuman grey-green waves of infantry, conscription and drill to automatization will have triumphed. But if Bob Robinson, thinking of his home in Calgary, can shoot truer; and if Tommy Atkins from God-knows-where in the London slum can hold his bayonet tighter, while he sings Tipperary; then its good-bye to the steam roller method in war, just as it's been a lengthened process all over Europe of good-bye to the autocrat in government, the censor in journalism, and the slave-driver in the construction gang."
